Canada comes first on energy

MUDDY DUNKING is enjoyed by these Boy Scouts who were among 2,000 from around the world to gather at Brant Park in Brantford, Ont., for a recent jamboree. It didn't take them long to find this man-size mudhole and do what came naturally.

Continental policy rejected by Hnatyshyn

OTTAWA (CP) — The government today rejected any idea of a common energy market with the U.S. and Mexico.

Government policy of energy self-sufficiency would be incompatible with the continental energy policy advocated by a number of U.S. politicians, said Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn.

"Our policy of Canadian self-sufficiency by its very nature indicates the fact that this government is interested in a Canada-first policy," he said.

This is the first time a cabinet minister has rejected the idea, which is increasingly being touted in the U.S. and was raised earlier this week by U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy, who urged the Carter administration to explore the possibility.

Two prominent politicians, Governor Jerry Brown of California and former governor John Connally of Texas, have also called for negotiation of such an agreement.

Hnatyshyn said continental energy policy was "the one issue that is apparently uniting all U.S. politicians, but it isn't uniting anyone else."

He said those politicians had failed to consider that Canada and Mexico might not find the arrangement as beneficial as the U.S.

Canada is interested in co-operating with the U.S. on energy projects, "but that's as far as I would go on it," Hnatyshyn said.

Hnatyshyn chatted with reporters before entering an inner cabinet meeting while Cyril Symes, New Democratic Party energy critic, was telling other reporters that the minister was in hiding to avoid making overdue decisions on natural gas exports.

"Important decisions must be made now on natural gas exports and the future of Petro-Canada," he said.

"Instead of showing leadership in these issues, the minister of energy is on vacation and will not comment until the fall. I find this abdication of leadership most irresponsible."

Symes released to reporters copies of a letter he has sent to Jack Stabback, chairman of the National Energy Board, urging denial of requests for permission to export more Alberta gas to the U.S.

The gas should be saved until a pipeline is built to ship it to Eastern Canada, Symes said.

ON THE INSIDE

Big jump for U.S. prices

U.S. consumer prices jumped another 1 per cent in June and the rate of inflation during the first half of 1979 showed its biggest six-month jump in 28 years, Washington reported today. Page 2.

Banks nationalized

Mrs. Kaiser sues

The second wife of Vancouver magnate Edgar F. Kaiser, is seeking $8 million plus in a divorce action. Former Kaiser Resources Ltd. executive Sue Haraguchi is named as co-respondent. Page 15.

$7,500 hike for MLAs

The 57 members of B.C. legislature are getting a 31-per-cent raise, their first since 1972.

A recent royal commission report said MLAs were underpaid and not getting enough expense money. Now they are in line for a $7,500-a-year hike.

The MLAs will receive $31,500 a year, up from $24,000. This consists of $21,000 a year in salary, up from $16,000, and $10,500 in tax-free allowance, up from $8,000.

The increase is expected to take effect immediately, but is not expected to be retroactive.

However, starting Jan. 1 MLAs will get automatic salary increases of 75 per cent of the percentage rate by which the average weekly wage increased in B.C. during the previous year. If the average wage drops, so will that of the MLAs.

The extra pay for the premier remains at $28,000 a year. Cabinet ministers will continue to receive an extra $24,000, opposition leader and speaker get $19,000 each and deputy speaker and leader of a recognized party get $8,500 each.

This means Premier Bill Bennett will be paid $59,500, Opposition leader Dave Barrett and Speaker Harvey Schroeder $50,500 and cabinet ministers $55,500.

The salary increases are included in a bill amending the Constitution Act presented to the legislature Wednesday night by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

The report of the royal commission, tabled in the legislature earlier this year, noted the cost of living had increased by 55.6 per cent in the last five years and recommended a salary increase to $19,000 a year and an increase in the tax-free allowance to $8,500 for a total of $27,500.

It also recommended the MLAs get a further $40 a day to a maximum of 55 days to cover accommodation while in Victoria and that they be reimbursed for actual expenses while travelling on government business.

Changes in the bill will allow the government to pay expenses other than those

Loto win not the ticket

TORONTO (CP) — Suky Bacvic won $1,300 and an all-expenses-paid trip for two in a Loto Canada lottery draw last Dec. 3 but he spent $50,000 to win them.

The 42-year-old Toronto electronics technician, who emigrated from Yugoslavia 18 years ago, sold his house in Hamilton and invested the money in lottery tickets — 5,000 of them.

"When I had the $50,000 in my hand, I had to decide if I was going to buy another house in Toronto or invest it in some other way," Bacvic said.

"With so many tickets I figured I had to win big."

Even the trip-for-two to anywhere in Canada he won turned out to be useless.

It took Bacvic almost six months to check all his tickets. When he'd finished, he had only one week before the six-month time period for claiming the prize expired.

He sent in his winning ticket and a week later officials told him his travel ticket vouchers were ready. It was only after he collected his prize that he realized the tickets expired the same day.

But even with all his bad luck, Bacvic remains optimistic.

"So, I spent all this money and only won peanuts. I'm pretty broke now, but I can make more money through hard work."

$150,000 daylight robbery

NELSON (CP) — Two men armed with handguns escaped with about $150,000 worth of merchandise and cash in a smoothly-executed daylight robbery at a jewelry store here.

Police said the gunmen entered the store and pretended to be customers for about five minutes. The robbers then pulled guns on the four employees — one man and three women — and placed a sign on the door saying the business was closed until later in the day.

The gunmen took the employees to the rear of McLachlan Jewelers, where they bound, handcuffed and gagged them, and then began removing jewelry, watches and $3,500 in cash.

Wining, dining to eat up half of food dollar

OTTAWA (UPC) — Within six years, Canadians will spend as much money wining and dining at their favorite restaurant as they do at the supermarket, a government report said Wednesday.

Canadians now spend one-third of every food dollar on food and alcoholic beverages in restaurants, but between 1982 and 1985 this will increase to 50 per cent, says a consumer and corporate affairs report.

Canadians' changing eating habits will represent a boon for the restaurant industry, which will grow by 10 per cent or an additional 3,500 outlets in the next five years, the report says. It was based on interviews with 93 Canadian food service firms between December, 1977, and January, 1978.

The report, prepared by a Toronto consulting firm, says fast-food operations and restaurants geared to the family market will be the fastest-growing outlets.

Also in Ottawa, the Conference Board said Canadians are generally optimistic about the state of the economy despite warnings of an impending economic slowdown.

In its survey of consumer buying intentions, the Board said Wednesday Canadians intend to vacation in Canada, buy more cars and improve their homes within the next six months.

Fires hit holidays

Holidays have been postponed for rangers and other key forest service personnel across most of B.C. because of the high fire hazard.

A spokesman for the rangers said the order came out today in the form of a radiogram and affects all of Vancouver Island and most of the province.

"The fire hazard is high in the Victoria area and extremely high further up the Island," he said.

But Victoria photographer John Barnard has.

In a precedent-setting case with implications across Canada, Barnard has won the right to claim expenses on his 23-foot boat as a deduction on his income tax.

Barnard's lawyer George Jones said today that until now taxpayers could not claim expenses for anything that was a yacht.

The ruling was introduced in 1971 after the tax department felt too many businessmen were claiming expenses on boats primarily used for pleasure.

Jones said, however, the Income Tax Act failed to define what a yacht was.

"Recently, across the country, Revenue Canada has been taking the position that any boat is a yacht," Jones said. "They've been particularly hard on taxpayers in Victoria. It's sort of an out-of-the-way place and I guess they figured they could get away with it."

Jones maintained Barnard's boat didn't come within the layman's definition of what a yacht was and his view was upheld by Lucien Cardin, chairman of the Tax Review Board in a written judgment.

Barnard, a commercial photographer with offices at 1005 Broad, sought deductions of $1,669 and $3,234 for boat expenses incurred in 1975 and 1976. The minister declined the claims on Jan. 25, 1978.

Cardin, in his judgment, noted Barnard bought the boat for $13,000 and had used it primarily to accumulate information for a fishing almanac he published for use of sports fishermen on the West Coast.

Although the boat was considered a commercial vessel by the sellers, the tax department argued that the design of the boat was that of a pleasure craft and not that of a work boat and consequently could not be claimed as a deduction.

But Cardin held the intent of the regulation was to include only yachts or vessels used for recreational purposes.

"I do not believe that the design of the boat can, by itself, determine whether or not a boat is a pleasure craft," he said. "The only valid criteria, as I see it, in determining whether or not a boat is a yacht within the meaning of (the regulation), is the use that is generally made of it."

He concluded Barnard's claims were justified and hence, deductible.

Whistler act a monster, says NDP

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The NDP accused the B.C. government Wednesday of creating an uncontrollable monster that will devour all the profits of the new ski development at Whistler while trammeling the rights of citizens already living there.

The opposition says the bill that sets up the Whistler Resort Association establishes a special society for the wealthy giving them all the powers of a municipal council without the normal checks other local governments fall under.

The debate on second reading of the bill that raged through the long afternoon — and will continue today — reached heights of bitterness, shouting and name-calling unseen or heard since the NDP government was pushing through some of its legislation.

The surface intent of the legislation is to give investors in the new Whistler townsite that will accompany the development of Blackcomb Mountain ski area special considerations for promoting, developing, maintaining and operating the new resort.

But the NDP suggest there are underlying reasons tainting the supposedly innocent legislation.

They are calling the bill the "sleeper" of the waning legislative session, hinting it will lead to corruption that will blow up in the Social Credit government's face.

Party researchers have been in Whistler and Vancouver searching titles of land ownership, trying to find out who will gain from the windfall profits that are bound to be made by members of the special society. They are also looking for political connections.

If that report is true, the NDP is doing its best to drive the wedge deeper.

They've attached special significance to the fact Premier Bill Bennett quickly slipped from the chambers immediately before the start of second reading debate. He's hiding in his bunker, one NDP-er quipped.

And while its introducer — Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm — has remained silent except for his opening address — Labor Minister Allan Williams entered the debate with unaccustomed vigor. Williams is the area's MLA.

He accused the NDP of showing "abysmal ignorance" in their lack of comprehension of the bill.

In a biting personal attack of his own, he said the NDP was covering its incompetence with personal attacks.

Contrary to being a monster as the NDP suggests,

U.S. prices jump as $ slides

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer prices jumped another 1 per cent in June and the rate of inflation during the first half of 1979 showed its biggest six-month jump in 28 years, the government reported today.

Soaring energy and housing costs last month more than offset encouraging moderation in retail food prices, the Labor Department said.

Meanwhile, the U.S. dollar opened with a sharp fall on European money markets and closed lower in Tokyo today in what dealers said was a response to indications from President Carter he plans no special measures to support the ailing currency.

Gold hit a two-day opening high of $307.3750 per ounce against Wednesday's close of $303.8750 and shot up to $306.625 per ounce in Zurich from Wednesday's close of $304.75.

The dollar closed in active selling at 214.35 yen in Tokyo, down from Wednesday's 214.75.

It dropped to its lowest level in more than four years in London where the pound opened at $2.33 against Wednesday's close of $2.3215. The pound traded at $233.75 on May 9, 1975.

Zurich dealers said Carter's nomination of Paul Volcker as Federal Reserve chairman prompted the rise in gold.

"While Volcker's nomination was received well by the market, investors are exercising caution until they see what his policies will be," one Zurich banker said. "This explains the new jump in gold as well as continued investor interest in the British pound.

"It will take a major statement of intent by Volcker to get the dollar moving upwards again," he said.

The dollar started trading at 1.8089 German marks down from 1.8163 in Frankfurt, at 1.6392 Swiss francs down from 1.6404 in Zurich, 4.2125 French francs down from 4.22725 in Paris, 30.075 Belgian francs down from 30.14 in Brussels, 1.9908 guilders down from 1.9970 in Amsterdam and 813.50 lire down from 815.95 in Milan.

Dealers in Frankfurt, Zurich, Stockholm and Tokyo said indications from President Carter that there will be "no immediate remedy for the shaky currency" had caused the dollar's poor showing.

Dealers in Japan said a rash of selling started immediately after Carter's speech.

"Many traders and foreign banks who bought dollars to correct their oversold position ahead of Carter's speech sold the currency actively . . . They said the president's speech featured no immediate remedy for the shaky currency," a dealer said.

In Washington, the Labor Department said the dismal 13.2 per cent rate of increase during the first half of the year was the sharpest rise for any six-month period since the 14 per cent increase between September, 1950, and February, 1951.

In comparison, prices rose at a 9.8 per cent annual rate during the first six months of 1978.

In another dose of gloomy news, the Labor Department said the buying power of the typical family of four decreased by 0.8 per cent last month and was down by 3.5 per cent over the past year.

Clan McViet piped aboard

OTTAWA (CP) — Letters to the editor are a fixture of all newspapers, often advocate one extreme view of a major issue or another but rarely make the front page themselves.

This excerpt from a recent letter on Vietnamese refugees, by Harry McLaughlan, a concerned citizen of Scottish ancestry, of Stittsville, Ont., to an Ottawa newspaper, The Citizen, is an exception:

"We can't continue to accept, into this country, a people whose tortured English is barely comprehensible; whose music and instruments are alien and tuneless irritations to Canadian ears; whose style of traditional dress makes it difficult to tell the men from the women; and whose instinctive hoarding of money can only harm our struggling economy.

"The Canadian government should immediately close its immigration office in Glasgow."

Fare deal extended

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian transport commission has approved an extension of CP Air's SkyBus fares to April 30, 1980, the airline said Wednesday.

SkyBus offers one-way fares of $94.50 between here and Toronto and $79.50 between Edmonton-Calgary and Toronto, lowest transcontinental fares in Canada.

A CP Air spokesman said the airline is pleased with the extension to April 30 from Oct. 31, 1979, but disappointed the fares were not approved on a year-round basis.

Vibrations ground DC-10

CLEVELAND (AP) — Passengers said they heard a boom, then felt vibrations when an engine failed on a DC-10, causing the plane to make an emergency landing.

Jim Guyette, United Airlines operations director at Cleveland, said the engine on the plane's right wing failed somewhere over Indiana, forcing the pilot to bring the craft into Cleveland on its remaining two engines.

The plane was headed to Newark, N.J., from Los Angeles.

Flight 4, with 172 passengers aboard, landed safely at Hopkins International Airport Wednesday.

The forced landing came 12 days after the Federal Aviation Administration ended a 37-day grounding of the U.S. DC-10 fleet.

Faulty engine mounts on the wide-body jets have been cited as a possible cause for a crash in Chicago on May 25 that killed 273 persons in the worst air disaster in U.S. history.

"We have determined that the engine did fail but we can't be sure of the reason," said Guyette:

"But the problem is the kind that any airplane can have and doesn't appear to be connected with the kind of problems experienced by the plane that crashed."

Hymie Liebman, an auctioneer from Johannesburg, South Africa, was aboard the flight. He said: "All we heard was a boom."

Liebman, 50, en route to Princeton, N.J., to visit his sister-in-law, said that after hearing the explosive noise, the [illegible] engine had been shut down because of excessive vibration.

On Sunday, another United DC-10 made an unscheduled landing at the Baltimore-Washington International Airport after developing trouble in its right-wing engine. That landing was prompted by a fan blade that failed and went into the engine shortly after takeoff, airline officials said.

Ross appeal filed

Tommy Ross Jr. will appeal his conviction of first degree murder in the Mother's Day, 1978 slaying in Victoria of 26-year-old Janice Forbes.

Ross's lawyer Douglas Christie filed notice of appeal this week but no date has been set yet for the hearing.

A B.C. Supreme Court jury of seven men and five women found Ross, 20, of Los Angeles, guilty on July 12 after deliberating about five hours.

He was given the mandatory sentence of life imprisonment with no possibility for parole for 25 years.

Forbes, the mother of two was found bound and strangled on May 14, 1978, in her apartment at 207-1017 Queens.

The Crown's case against Ross was built around a thumb print identified by police as Ross's which was found on a teapot in the apartment, as well as the identification of Ross by a number of witnesses as being in and around the apartment block on the day of the murder.

Chemical cloud hits

FILAGO, Italy (AP) — At least 14 persons were taken to hospital for treatment of vomiting and sore throats early today and dozens more suffered similar symptoms after a chemical cloud drifted over this town in northern Italy and several nearby villages, authorities said.

The cloud was traced to a chemical plant, authorities said.

Police sources said it began to form after unidentified acids leaked into the sewers and then into a stream crossing the town.

Authorities said the effects were temporary and not serious. But the chemical factory was closed.

Finally, the name of Mudd gets pulled from the mire

It took 114 years, six presidents and several generations, but the besmirched Mudd family name has finally been given an official vote of confidence. U.S. President Jimmy Carter issued a letter Wednesday absolving Dr. Samuel Mudd from any role in the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. That made the doctor's 79-year-old grandson a happy man. His grandfather's troubles had inspired the phrase: "His name is mud." "I'm ecstatic," said Dr. Richard Mudd of Saginaw, Mich.

Entertainer Anita Bryant will be promoting orange juice for another year. Miss Bryant's contract with the Florida Citrus Commission was unanimously extended by one year on Wednesday, ending speculation she would be dumped because of her anti-homosexual rights activities.

A French baron who used a sail and a surfboard on wheels to cross 1,300 kilometres of the Sahara Desert now plans to challenge the Bering Strait on a wind-powered journey to Alaska from the Soviet Union. Baron Arnaud de Rosnay plans to leave Uelen, Siberia, on Aug. 20 on a three-metre surfboard, complete with sail and sporting the flags of the Soviet Union and the United States.

Former beauty queen Joyce McKinney, charged in England with kidnapping a Mormon missionary in 1977 and forcing him to have sex with her, has been indicted in Seattle on a charge of using a false name to get a passport.

The Benetti shipyard at Viareggio, Italy, launched what may be the flashiest toy afloat Wednesday. It's a five-deck, air-conditioned motor yacht with pool, cinema, helicopter and five speedboats. The 282-foot craft also boasts an underwater remote control camera that delivers the wonders of the deep to those aboard via closed circuit color television. Owner of the floating Taj Mahal is Saudi businessman Adnan Khashoggi — said to be one of the world's wealthiest men. He has to be. His new yacht is setting him back an estimated $24 million.

At today's prices, two dozen pieces of charred Skylab earned an Australian youth nearly five times their weight in gold. Stanley Thornton Jr. told a news conference at the Goddard Space Flight Centre in Greenbelt, Md., Wednesday how he found 24 charred pieces of the spacecraft that plunged to earth over his hometown of Esperance, Australia. Don Whitten, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said the pieces weighed less than a pound. At today's market, that much gold — selling at a little more than $300 an ounce — would have sold for about $4,800. But the 17-year-old Thornton flew to the United States to claim a $10,000 award from the San Francisco Examiner for being the first person to present the newspaper with a verified piece of the spacecraft. He also received from a Philadelphia furniture store $10,000 in furniture and $1,000 in cash.

Bryant . . . juices still flowing

And finally, a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling that any employer holding a group insurance policy with 15 or more employees must pay for maternity coverage has the Rev. Theodoric Dejong fuming. Says he, "It's silly to be paying for benefits that we will never collect. We are paying something for nothing." DeJong is comptroller of the Roman Catholic Diocese of Spokane, Wash., and the policy in question covers 66 priests. But the priests aren't alone. Says Blue Cross spokesman Bill Baker, "As a matter of fact, a group of nuns in Seattle is having the same problem."

Singh gets nod

NEW DELHI (AP) — Charan Singh, 76-year-old leader of the party revolt that toppled Morarji Desai's government, was named today to become India's fifth prime minister.

Singh, chief of the rural bloc in Parliament, was tapped by President Neelam Sanjiva Reddy to form the next government after Reddy reviewed lists of parliamentary supporters submitted by him and by Desai.

Since then, the 83-year-old Desai has been trying for a comeback on grounds that he still leads the largest single party.

But Reddy ruled in favor of Singh, Desai's rival, after studying lists of parliamentary supporters which the two contenders submitted to the president Wednesday.

Choppers watching

WARRENTON, Ore. (AP) — Coast Guard helicopters surveyed fishing boats off the United States Northwest coast Wednesday for violations of a 10-day ban on commercial salmon fishing ordered by a federal judge.

The closure, which took effect Wednesday has angered Oregon and Washington trollers. The area from Cape Falcon to the Canadian border is affected.

U.S. District Judge William Schwarzer issued the order, intended to make sure Indian tribes with treaty fishing rights have access to their share of Columbia River salmon.

Nicaragua junta clamps banks

MANAGUA (AP) — The revolutionary government Wednesday nationalized Nicaragua's four private banks and ordered three U.S.-owned banks to stop accepting deposits from the public.

But the bank nationalization "does not mean that we are on the way to a socialist government," junta member Alfonso Robelo told a news conference.

He said they were taken over "as a social responsibility" because their assets were $100 million less than their foreign obligations.

He said the U.S. banks — Citibank, Bank of America and Wells Fargo — "can continue operating in the country but cannot take in deposits from the public."

"We will announce the new rules under which those banks can operate."

Moises Hassan, another member of the junta, said the new government decided to nationalize the domestic banks after it learned they have a total foreign debt of $180 million and assets of about $80 million.

"The new goverment will take over that foreign debt as a social responsibility," Robelo said.

A fifth private bank, Banco de Centroamericano, was owned by President Anastasio Somoza and was confiscated along with the rest of the dictator's property earlier this week.

Robelo said Nicaragua's post-Somoza economy will be a mixture of government and private enterprise. He said the government plans to nationalize the mining, forestry and fishing industries, but the takeover will be well in the future.

"It could be five years, it could be 20," he said.

Mining in Nicaragua is mostly for gold and most of it is done by three U.S. concerns, the Gold Mining Co., the Rosita Mine Co., and the Neptune Mine Co.

The largest fishing fleets were owned by Somoza and were taken over with the rest of his holdings in the country. The junta said the 52 expropriated properties also included enormous estates, an airline, hotels, a cement company, a television and radio station, an automobile distributorship, ports, manufacturing companies, fish processors, a tourism development project and a host of other interests.

PLO envoy dies

NICE, France (UPI) — Palestinine Liberation Organization official Zuheir Mohsen died today of a gunshot wound inflicted in an ambush by unknown assassins outside his luxury Riviera apartment Wednesday.

An official at the Saint Roch Neurosurgical Clinic of the Pasteur Hospital said Mohsen, 43, died at 4:30 p.m. (7:30 a.m. PDT).

Two gunmen, described by his wife as a European and an Arab, fired on Mohsen at close range outside his luxury apartment in nearby Cannes early Wednesday, inflicting a massive gunshot wound of the head.

The burly, moustachioed Mohsen died without regaining consciousness, the hospital spokesman said.

It was no bed of roses for him

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP) — A 38-year-old transient had his cigarettes crushed, but escaped the same fate himself when he and his bed of garbage were compacted and hauled to the Douglas County landfill Wednesday.

Rufus Harrison was awakened when the dumpster in which he was sleeping was picked up by a compactor garbage truck, sheriffs deputies said.

The dumpster was only a quarter-full when Harrison bedded down in it. Apparently he thought it wouldn't be picked up until it was at least half full, deputies said.

Garbage truck driver Dave Hedly told deputies he thought he heard someone yell when he picked up the dumpster but didn't see anyone when he walked around the truck. So he continued on to the landfill.

After being unloaded, Harrison "fell out moaning and groaning," sheriff's dispatcher Elaine Johnson said. "It was lucky they heard him because he wasn't too loud at that point."

Harrison suffered scrapes, bruises and a puncture wound in his behind, deputies said. He was treated at a local hospital and released to officials from the Community Alcohol Centre.

Ripper strikes in London

LONDON (UPI) — The body of a young woman who had been repeatedly stabbed was found in a side street in the red light district of Whitechapel in London's grimy Dockland area, police reported today.

The body lay in a pool of blood almost exactly on the spot in Half Moon passage where Jack the Ripper stabbed and mutilated a prostitute during his reign of terror in the the year 1888.

Prove that it works

The B.C. government is indignant because federal health and welfare minister David Crombie has declined to provide federal financial support for the province's controversial compulsory heroin treatment program.

The province believes that the program, parts of which are still under review by the courts, is a health treatment program like any other and should therefore be eligible for federal funds under federal-provincial cost-sharing agreements.

Crombie has said, however, that Ottawa would be pleased to contribute to the costs of a program which addicts attend voluntarily, but would not support a program into which persons could be forced by the courts or the police. The compulsory aspects of the program make it different from other health programs, he implied, so the cost-sharing agreements would not apply.

Although federal dollars are always welcome to share the costs of any B.C. program, Crombie appears to be taking the correct stand.

The B.C. program is a contentious and unproved experiment. Many experts in the field maintain it is likely to be a waste of millions of dollars. Compulsory treatment programs in other North American jurisdictions have generally proved to be dismal failures.

The rate of success for all heroin addiction treatment programs is very low. When addicts with no motivation to change their lifestyles are forced into a program, it drops lower still.

Moreover, Crombie is right in saying that the compulsory aspects of treatment set the experiment apart from ordinary health care programs. It is rather an odd amalgam of health care and law enforcement. A centre with guards and fences where a person is compelled to stay is perceived as a jail, even if it is called a hospital.

Indeed, some of the compulsory aspects of the program — those allowing the police to initiate the process of sending someone into forced treatment — are so contentious that so far they have not been implemented. The government awaits a court ruling on whether the legislation is constitutional.

The few addicts now at the Brannan Lake treatment centre are either there voluntarily or have been sent by the courts as an alternative to a jail sentence.

In a time of much-needed restraint, the federal government should surely not be spending money on such a tenuous program.

We in B.C. have chosen to elect a government that wishes to embark on this experiment, hoping it will provide a solution to a difficult problem. Fair enough. The other taxpayers of Canada, however, should not be required to contribute until we have proved that it is constitutional and that it works.

Garbage art

Some may see her design as a bit of heavyhanded irony, but New York artist Mierle Ukeles is pressing on with her six-month project in conceptual art — shaking hands with every one of New York city's 8,500 sanitation workers. It's entitled Touch Sanitation.

Art meets garbage, or vice versa? She plans to make 10 sweeps through the Big Apple's 58 sanitation districts to press the flesh with the "Sanmen" — the artist's and the sanitation workers' term for themselves. The project is funded by two foundation grants and several private sources. The sanitation department is co-operating enthusiastically, but hasn't put any money into it.

"I look at this as the real underbelly of our society. These are the men who really keep this society going. And we're in this together. This is not their garbage. It's our garbage," said Mrs. Ukeles this week as she inaugurated her work of art with a first batch of handshakes at one sanitation depot.

She became involved in what she calls "maintenance art" 10 years ago, when her big inflatable sculptures kept falling apart and breaking.

"I realized then that there is a lot more to maintenance and mechanics than most of us appreciate." The experience produced her "Manifesto for Maintenance Art" in 1969, and ultimately led to her handshaking project.

If it breaks down some of the barriers between Art and Life, then it's all to the good. Who knows, she meet some of the guys who hauled away her old inflatable sculptures.

Build that pipeline

Now is the time for action. Canada can solve its west coast oil port problem by opting unreservedly for the Alaska highway oil pipeline route. It should also back this Foothills project because a line parallelling the Alaska highway can be used to bring northern Canadian oil south to Canadian refineries from coast to coast.

Ottawa and Washington now agree on the Alaska Highway route for Alaskan gas destined for the lower 48 States. Why not use the same transportation corridor for crude oil? It makes sense both from a short run and a long term point of view.

Otherwise what will we have? Alaskan oil will be moving by tanker down the west coast in increasing volume. A major oil port will be built at Port Angeles just across the Strait of Juan de Fuca. And Chicago will be supplied by a big pipeline running inland from Washington state.

The advantages for us of the Alaska highway route are obvious. They are Environmental and they are economic. Oil spills won't be anything like as serious as those which can occur at sea. Also transportation costs can be kept to a minimum by going overland in a relatively straight line from northern Alaska to the mid-continent area of the U.S.

An oil line built initially to move Alaskan oil to the Lower 48 States has an on-going value for Canadians. It would be a common carrier. It would carry northern Canadian oil to British Columbia, the prairie provinces and eastern Canada. It would, in other words, provide us with low cost transportation for Canadian oil found in the Mackenzie delta and off shore in the Beaufort Sea.

What are our Canadian alternatives? A Kitimat oil pipeline to Edmonton could be used exclusively to supply U.S. needs. It wouldn't move our northern oil to Canadian markets. Reversing the Trans-Mountain oil pipeline would be worse. Not only would it bring tankers in closer to Vancouver, B.C., but it could also limit movement of Alberta oil to the west coast as well.

Clearly an oil line following the Alaska Highway would benefit B.C. President Carter should be convinced that the Canadian land bridge for Alaskan crude oil is just as economic and just as safe as a gas line down across the Yukon, northeastern B.C. and the prairie provinces.

British Columbia and Ottawa should therefore endorse the Alaska Highway project as a matter of national policy. They should also press for its approval in the United States. Time is of the essence and unless we move quickly we are likely to see ports and pipelines built which will hurt us in many, many ways. — Jack Davis, MLA, North Vancouver-Seymour.

More buses please

I am sending you this letter in hopes that someone might take some action to improve the poor transit system we have out in our area of Colwood and the western community.

I, myself, must walk one and one-half miles to catch a bus at Colwood Corner in order to get to my job in Esquimalt by 10 a.m. During the winter months this will be quite an inconvenience.

I have my mother living with me. She is 73 years old and would dearly love to join the Golden Age club. She would have to wait for three hours at the Juan de Fuca recreation centre, because she would have to catch the bus at 10 a.m. The club opens at 1:30 p.m., and who wants to hang around Colwood Corners for three hours with nothing to do?

I also have a son and a daughter going to the University of Victoria, who have to depend on us to provide transportation because of the lack of scheduled bus runs.

Our youngest child, who is 14, would like to get into town to see a movie on weekends and not have to worry about getting home. But the last bus run is at 5:45 p.m.

One would have thought that our area would have progressed faster in transit service than this for such a populated area as we have here in the Western Community. — Mrs. Wanda Reekie, 2908 Carol Ann Place.

Didn't ask me

I am fed up with the so-called democratic process Canada is alleged to have. The people were not asked to vote on bringing in the metric system which is a big headache and rip-off for consumers.

We were not consulted when Parliament put on restrictions on qualifications for unemployment insurance when unemployment is soaring.

The MPs in this country do not consult or represent the people on anything at all. They vote themselves increases in salary. They sanction the killing of seals every year off Newfoundland when public opinion is against it coast to coast.

The biggest majority of Canadians knows how dangerous reactors are but Canada sells them to anyone.

Why aren't Canadian people heard through their MPs?

The Canadian people do not have any say in whether the so-called "boat people" are allowed in here or not.

With unemployment so high I think the Canadian people have a right to vote on whether we accept "boat people" or not. After all, is this not a democratic country? — Wayne C. Mott, 945 Scotia Street.

Spank head writer

Upon reading the front page of your newspaper (July 14), I was angered to see yet another of your sexist headlines, Spanking of Wives Defended. Although one cannot argue with the actual events in Kenya, one would think that they should be treated with more respect than to have cutesy-coy headlines tagged onto them. Obviously, this is the work of someone who has no idea of what he is talking about and makes light of such a serious matter as wife-beating by referring to it as "spanking." — Josephine O'Carroll, Victoria.

Unthinkable? That's mere puffery, or blackmail

By PETER LESLIE

This is the last of a four-part series examining the implications of sovereignty-association for Canada. Mr. Leslie is an associate of the Institute of Intergovernmental Relations and a teacher of political studies at Queen's University.

Quebecers have a more radical choice to make than is being put to them by the Parti Quebecois. The PQ proposes political independence for Quebec, plus a treaty with the rest of Canada to create a two-member economic association.

That option may seem radical in itself, but the PQ takes a lot for granted. It takes one to secede, but two to associate.

Actually, in this case it probably takes more than two. Canada is a land of regions; it's not just Quebec and "the rest." The diversity of regional economic interests would force recognition of the multilateral character of any economic association.

That's why Quebec will eventually have to choose between full independence, without association, and some kind of linkage with other regions in a multi-member grouping. The reinvention of Canada, whether as association or federation, will require the participation of the regions. It might involve the creation of institutional frameworks as yet unimagined.

It would be outvoted

What are the attractions and disadvantages of multilateralism for the Quebecers who now feel frustrated within the Canadian federal state?

The main reason for their rejecting a multimember association is that Quebec would incur the risk of being outvoted. Obviously, it would not have a voice equal to that of the other three-quarters. For those who see "English Canada" as a cohesive bloc, always lining up against Quebec within Confederation, anything other than a one-to-one relationship on the basis of parity would clearly be ruled out. But that perception rests on the dubious view that language or ethnic origin determines one's stance on every policy question, including those relating to economic affairs.

This is an opinion which is implicit in much independentist thinking. For example, it underlies Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin's account of federal-provincial relations during the past 15 or 20 years. It is hard, though, to square this interpretation with the history of interprovincial co-operation in opposing federal power, especially during the latter part of this period. It's been rare for the nine English-majority provinces to line up against Quebec. There is no reason to suppose it would be otherwise in the future.

Accordingly, multilateralism would allow coalition-building. The powers of a central authority might be no more extensive than the PQ now envisions for the Quebec-Canada association, but their exercise would involve a form of bargaining in which Quebec would find supporters for the policy initiatives it wants or requires.

On some issues it might find itself allied with the primary-producing provinces of the west, on others with industrial Ontario, and on still others with the Atlantic provinces with whom it shares the problem of slow growth.

By contrast, association on the PQ model would almost certainly produce stalemate on many matters in which a decision would be critically important for Quebec as for other regions. Might not Quebec be safer in a multi-unit confederation with opportunities for bargaining, than as the poor relation in a two-unit association? Inevitably, Quebec would sometimes be in the minority, and perhaps that risk would be intolerable. If so, Quebecers might well opt for sovereignty, but then they should see why association under PQ conditions would be intolerable to the rest.

A second question concerns the extent of powers to be exercised by a central authority. This will inevitably be the subject of intense negotiation; it will not be avoided even if Quebecers reject the sovereignty-association option in next spring's referendum. For one thing, that status quo is no more acceptable to the Quebec Liberal party than it is to the PQ, and for another, the existing arrangements have powerful challengers in the Canadian west.

We ought not to delude ourselves: the PQ will not be persuaded that federalism is better than sovereignty. But if the rest of Canada insists, for democratic reasons, on a directly elected assembly, that too reinforces one's impression that the Quebec electorate will eventually have a more radical choice to make than the PQ acknowledges.

One option is unhyphenated sovereignty. Another option may be sovereignty plus a multilateral association. But perhaps the only realistic option, other than sovereignty, is federalism.

Ultimately, the choices facing Quebecers will not be defined in any referendum sponsored by the government of Quebec. The range of options can be defined only outside of Quebec. Accordingly, the rest of Canada has some serious thinking to do.

Alberta is the main challenger, outside Quebec, of the existing distribution of powers. It is by no means the only province which sees itself as a victim of federal economic policies, but its energy resources give it firepower not possessed by other decentralist-minded provinces.

In part, these provinces hope to expand the powers of the provincial goverments, giving them more control over the course of their own economic development; a policy of self-reliance; a policy which rests on their ability to restrict the degree of economic integration of Canada.

If Ottawa's powers are restricted, they may be handed over to the provinces or they may be declared out of bounds for government altogether. The latter option would be entirely consistent with a full-fledged common market and monetary union, and would represent a strict application of the principles endorsed by the Parti Quebecois as the basis for sovereignty-association.

Is a strong central government necessary to run a common market? Probably not. The full economic integration of Canada is probably quite consistent with a constitutional order in which all governments operate under constraints which prevent them from meddling too much in the operation of markets for goods, labor and capital.

Are we willing?

It's unlikely though that an association of five or 10 states would suit even those provinces which are strongly critical of federal policies.

At the economic level, there are two main objections. One is that joint economic policies would still produce winners and losers, and the losers would need compensation. Commercial and monetary policies adopted through joint institutions simply could not be devised in such a way as to be entirely neutral as between regions. The main example: unequal sharing of the costs of the tariff would be unavoidable. As at present, the burden of tariff protection for industry would necessarily be borne disproportionately by those regions which sell in export markets, the primary-producing regions.

The second objection to emasculating federal powers is that provinces with vulnerable economies need shelter. To provide it, a central government with extensive constitutional powers and substantial financial resources is called for.

Even a Canada without Quebec would have to make up its mind on the extent of economic integration it wanted, and the powers to be accorded a central authority. There are tendencies afoot to expand the powers of the provincial government, inevitably reducing the free movement of goods, labor and capital — in other words, restricting the operation of the Canadian common market. The disadvantages of economic fragmentation are already being felt, however, and there may be strong resistance to much more of it.

In that case, another option — also consistent with some current tendencies — would be to reaffirm the principles of a common market, but to reduce the capacity of the federal government to implement discriminatory economic policies. This solution, in its pure form, is economic association — though presumably on a multilateral basis. Would it be acceptable?

Although there is strong support even outside Quebec for reducing Ottawa's powers, the arguments for strong government at the centre are telling. There are at least three of them. One is based on democratic principles: that central institutions need to be subject to electoral controls. A second is that the benefits of economic integration ought to be spread as evenly as possible, and that where some policies work to the disadvantage of a region, other policies should offer compensation. A third argument is that it is morally and politically imperative to underwrite the economic risks to which resource-based regional economies are prone.

Are these arguments strong enough to win the support of most Canadians? If not, it's time to prepare a briefing book for the negotiations on sovereignty-association. If so, the reasons for rejecting sovereignty-association must be formulated clearly and without hesitation or ambiguity.

At present, the declaration that sovereignty-association is unthinkable appears to be mere puffery. Or worse, blackmail. And that's no way to face political demands which reflect a people's striving for self-respect and their determination to treat with others, equal to equal.

Smoothing slopes for ski developers

By MARJORIE NICHOLS
The Sun

If you were a member of a government with a nasty little piece of legislation to introduce would you (1) introduce it at the beginning of the session when all Opposition members were keen and rested, or (2) would you wait until the mercury hit 30 and the Opposition benches were suffering obvious signs of exhaustion and disinterest?

Exactly. Which is why last Friday, just before the MLAs charged for the ferry dock, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm introduced his bill, entitled: Resort Municipality of Whistler Amendment Act, 1979.

The title of this bill is about as revealing as the exterior of a plain brown envelope. A much better description would be "An Act to Aid Developers of Whistler Mountain."

The principle of this bill is quite innovative in its violations of accepted democratic process. It would, in effect, extend to a private association of landowners the taxation powers of a government, or its properly constituted agent. It would, furthermore, abolish that quaint principle of democratic process known as one-man-one-vote.

Chamber of commerce?

Mr. Vander Zalm attempted to persuade that the new corporation to be known as the Whistler Resort Association was nothing more than a glorified chamber of commerce. The bill says the purpose of the new association will be to "promote, facilitate and encourage the development, maintenance and operation of the resort land" at Whistler.

Nothing wrong with that. The question you have to ask yourself is why a group of local merchants and landowners would have to go all the way to Victoria to ask for legislative authority to do what any chamber of commerce can do.

The answer is that this association is much more than a chamber of commerce, despite its innocent-sounding objectives. It is effectively a new level of government with powers to coerce, to enforce payment of levies and to buy and sell real and personal property.

In brief, this bill would provide the new association with the powers to levy assessments on all members, who would be required to own or occupy land within the municipality. The catch is that not all landowners would have equal voting rights. The big owner would have a larger vote than the little owner.

Mr. Vander Zalm was quite forthcoming on this question. He readily conceded that other legislation, such as the Municipal Act, would frown on a system of "weighted voting."

Which undoubtedly is why the government decided to introduce a completely new act. The municipal affairs minister added that he sees nothing wrong with allowing the guy with a $10 million investment a larger say at the ballot box than a little businessman with a $15,000 investment.

But here is the real sticky one. This new association will be empowered to assess levies against members and if the members balk at coughing up the demanded loot, will be able to ask the provincial government to slap a lien on the property.

The association will furthermore be allowed to establish classes of members, decide who will be entitled to membership and, further, set the rules for voting. The bylaws setting forth these details will require approval of the local municipality as well as the cabinet.

But that is really not much consolation. The association (actually corporation in law) will be exempted from the provincial Companies Act, unless the cabinet, meeting in secret, decides to apply certain selected sections.

As a landowner in the municipality, the provincial government would be entitled to membership in this association, but Mr. Vander Zalm says it has no intention of exercising its entitlement.

To summarize. The Bennett government has in effect handed over to the most affluent landowners on Whistler Mountain the authority to develop the area as they see fit, with the province acting as bagman.

Mr. Vander Zalm says the resort operators in the area were in need of facility to promote themselves, for the general good of the provincial treasury as well as their own wallets.

The same could be said of every resort operator in the province. No doubt the motel owners' association in the Okanagan would like similar powers to make development decisions without the bother of seeking approval from the ordinary riff-raff (voters).

The Okanagan motel men might also be excited at the prospect of being able to ask Victoria to force non-cooperators to pay up. Mr. Vander Zalm says innocently that those landowners who don't want to join the association don't have to — and thus subject themselves to arbitrary measures.

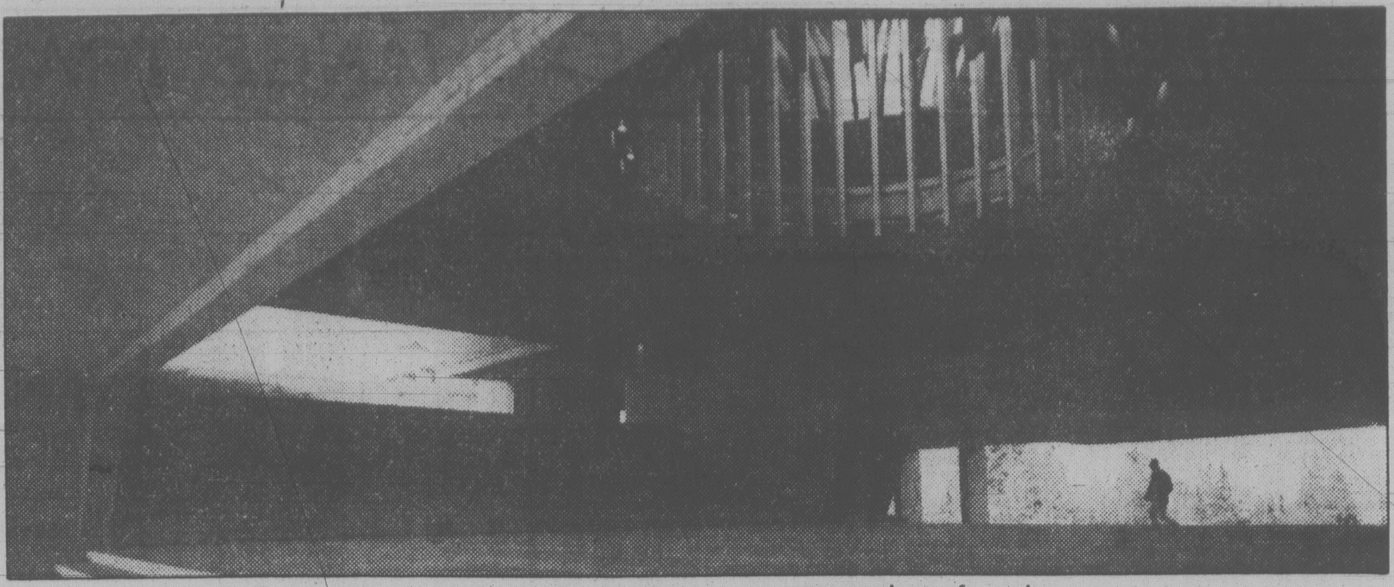
Vander Zalm evasive

True enough. Except that any landowner who didn't join would be a nitwit. How else could he attempt to protect his own interests?

Mr. Vander Zalm was somewhat evasive about the genesis of this legislative novelty. He kept mumbling about how Victoria was only acceding to a request, democratically submitted by the Whistler municipal council.

Sure. So how come, as the municipal affairs minister confirmed, Al Raine, longtime developer activist in the area, was sitting in the minister's outer office as the legislation was being drafted?

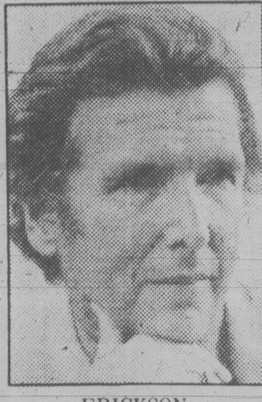
Ah, yes, one other thing. Who are these nice community-minded developers who will run this new coporation? You don't suppose, do you, that one or two or more might have connections to the Social Credit party?



Simon Fraser University . . . an expression of genius

Can we afford such splendor?

By DOUGLAS FISHER



ERICKSON
. . . 'like poetry'

OTTAWA — There's a trade-off in politics more bothersome than the controversial one between inflation and unemployment. It's between beauty or splendor and plain basic utility.

Of course, economists are now differing on whether we can any longer deflate by having swarms of people out of work and architects and designers do argue that creations of good form and artistic merit are usually the most functional.

The trade-off between beauty and cheapness began to be argued in Ottawa some two years ago when "restraint" became official policy. This has meant extolling frugality and condemning grandeur and lavishness in either programs or capital works. It's a trend which I have much talked up in these columns, using the image of Ottawa as "Fat City," oozing luxuriously in the results of dollars drawn from across Canada and spent, without a quaver, until 1976.

There's a splendid, long piece in The New Yorker of June 4 which has set me reflecting on my judgment and of those like me who push the theme of abstemious government. It is by Edith Iglauer and is about Arthur Erickson, arguably the most brilliant, exciting Canadian architect.

At present Erickson has works in widespread parts of the world but his hometown of Vancouver is most engaging his imagination and the architects and designers of his firm in the rebuilding of the city's centre. He is not old as great architects go — only 54 — and very provocative in his critiques of his field and of society.

"Where I am or what I am is no concern of mine," he told Ms. Iglauer. "I am concerned with what our civilization is all about, and expressing this in buildings. Everything I do, everything I see is through architecture. I am not involved in the aesthetics of architecture or interested in design as such. I'm interested in what buildings can do beyond what they look like, and how thay can affect whole areas and people's lives . . . I want to build with all details suppressed, to make what I build look as if it just happened — as if there were nothing studied, no labor or art involved. Architecture is no different from any other art process. It is like poetry, in which you compress everything into a few words. To achieve that economy takes a lifetime."

The structure which first brought Erickson to much more than the attention of British Columbia was the design of Simon Fraser University atop Burnaby Mountain. If you've been as fortunate as I have to walk around this almost-instant campus of the mid-60s, you know he's got the gifts. As Philip Johnson, described by Iglauer as the "grand signeur of American architects," told her: "Its spatial arrangements are incredible."

The man in charge of creating Simon Fraser University, Gordon Shrum, is now supervising the construction of the major current project of Erickson design, the civic centre in Vancouver. "His chore," writes Iglauer, "is to keep a tight hold on the purse strings, since Erickson, like most architects, sometimes has an aptitude for overspending."

That is, "the economy" referred to by Erickson in that fine statement printed above is the artistic compression of both detail and the functions of a building, not the economy of dollars and cents.

This brings me to a dilemma I face every day coming to and from work. Down the corner from my work-place is an Erickson masterpiece which is satisfying enough aesthetically but also sets my teeth grinding over what the politics of style and grandeur have done in the Trudeau era to drive frugality out of the federal government. It is the new Bank of Canada building.

The leaders of the bank seemed spurred to create their own cathedral for the worship of interest rates and Canada bonds to match the more gigantic cathedrals to Mammon which our private bankers have piled up in downtown Toronto.

Here is how Iglauer describes it:

"Erickson's addition to the Bank of Canada, in Ottawa, is a handsome, light twelve-storey structure of glass and copper, which gives a welcome variety to the gray quality of that city's architecture. The copper was pre-treated by workmen imported from Japan for their skill in producing what he felt was just the right greenish patina to blend the structure with 'the surrounding urban landscape'. His original plan called for a glassed-in mall as well, which would have linked the bank building to another structure across the end of one of the busiest streets in the Canadian capital, close to the Parliament Buildings, to make a winter garden. Ottawa winters are hideously cold and gray, and his concept would have added green trees all year round.

"Besides, the heat loss in the walls at either side would have been reduced, so it would have made good sense," he says. "Now there's just a canyon between the buildings where you can't grow anything."

The adjoining building, of course, is the new C. D. Howe building, a largely glass-sided palace into which the department of industry, trade and commerce moved last year. The original trade and commerce building, west another block, was found inadequate for the dignity and class of its officials (the department has the largest proportion of high-paid people in the whole government) even though it was a post-Second World War erection.

Plainness? Economy in capital cost and operating expenditures? Frugality? Or, beauty, sweep, modernity, style and costliness? Should we afford the genius of an Erickson?

A crime that can't lose

THE PROGRESSIVE
An Editorial

What a piece of work is the corporation. Executives at the Lockheed Corporation were caught illegally concealing bribes to Japanese government and business officials early in 1976. The bribes totalled $2.6 million. Another $20 million went to officials in other countries. How do you imagine these executives escaped criminal prosecution and jail? They blamed it on the corporation, as have officials at Westinghouse, Control Data and other companies before them. How do you imagine the U.S. Justice Department responded to this attempt to escape responsibility? Quietly.

It was a clever lawyer who first conceived the theory that the wrongs of the wealthy can be blamed on their companies. After all, corporations exist only in our imagination. They cannot be sent to jail. They cannot lose their right to vote or suffer other civil disabilities we impose on human felons. True, they can be fined, but this may not be so bad. Consider Lockheed again.

On June 8, Lockheed was fined $647,000 for concealing $2.6 million in bribes. The bribes were intended to encourage the purchase of 21 wide-bodied jets by the Japanese. So millions in profits were involved. The comparatively small fine, therefore, hardly cuts into the gain from the illegality. It's as if a man convicted of stealing $25,000 from a bank were fined $500 and allowed to keep the take.

One wonders why the Justice Department felt that this resolution of the Lockheed case served justice. It's not as if the responsible individuals could not be identified. They were. It's not as if we treat other lawbreakers this way. People who steal $100 often go to jail for years. The Lockheed case proves not only that crime pays. It proves that the right kind of crime pays even if you get caught.

What do they know?

Katharine Whitehorn

LONDON — There is a sort of romantic novel in which the heroine, as soon as she rises from the nuptial couch, straightens her nightdress and proclaims with shining eyes.: "It'll be a boy — I know it!" And a boy it is.

In real life it's quite as likely to be nothing, or a girl; which is why I sometimes wonder if the men who get so passionately into the abortion argument spent their formative years in the locker-room reading this sort of drivel. Where else would they get all this certainty about the moment of the start of life?

The thought's prompted, of course, by John Corrie's Bill on abortion and I have every sympathy with those whose reaction to the word is just one long yawn; oh Lord, not all that again. All the same, I think it must now be looked at in a rather different light: as something about the different perceptions of men and women; and something that's not just about foetuses, but about the medical monopoly.

The Bill, which stands a good chance of becoming law, wants a wider conscience clause for dissenting medics. Second, it wants the word "grave" inserted in front of the "risk" a woman must be under before she's allowed to shed her load. In practice, it's not clear how much difference these two would actually make, since so much depends, even now, on the local medical interpretation of the law: as it is, you can get an abortion at the drop of a hat in Tower Hamlets, only at the drop of a cheque in the oh-so-moral Midlands.

The Bill also wants the last date for an abortion set at 20 weeks instead of 28. On the face of it this seems sensible: a woman's got to make up her mind sooner or later whether she wants the abortion or not, and if she does, then the sooner the safer.

What makes nonsense of it, though, is firstly that less than 1 per cent of abortions are done that late anyway, and half of them are done on foreign women, who start too late simply because of the restrictions they face in their own countries. Second, it's the very safeguards and referrals and red tape that Corrie wants to step up that delay women from the time when the whole thing is perfectly simple into the time when it is trickier and nastier — and when she has already begun to feel more and more like a mother.

This is the part that men seem to find so hard to understand — and why I'm so often tempted to wish they'd stay out of the blasted argument altogether. They with their cut-and-dried intellectual training want everything to be neatly either one thing or the other. It's alive; it's dead. It's 20 weeks, it's 21 weeks (never mind the fact that even the statutory 40 weeks is only an average). But what every woman who's ever had a baby or a miscarriage knows — including the anti-abortionists — is that the process of the start of life simply isn't like that. It isn't like an electric switch, either on or off. It's like a sunrise; it grows; it's gradual. Somewhere between the moment when you say "my period is two days late" and the moment when you hold a baby in your arms, things have changed unalterably; but there is no precise moment, as the bureaucrats would so dearly love, at which you can say "now."

Attempts to make a logical moment of it are apt to be ludicrous. From the moment of conception, say Catholics. But then what about the fertilized ova that never stick on to the wall of the womb? As one priest gloomily admitted, if they really accepted the conception argument, then they ought to spend their time baptising the menstrual flow. When it "quickens"? The 18th century thought that was when a child came alive; and though it was a shaky proposition biologically, they'd hit the psychological moment about right: the transition from feeling "I'm pregnant" to feeling "I'm going to have a baby."

But what will push far too many women past that moment is the final clause of the Corrie Bill; which looks the most innocuous. It would make it unlawful for the agencies to which women go to ask about abortions to be also the places that actually do the deed. The clause is aimed at places like the Pregnancy Advisory Service which, though strictly within the law, have the quaint idea that things should be made as uncomplicated and straight-forward as possible.

And the clause would make it just that much harder, now and in the future, for women to deal with this matter themselves and avoid the hassle and delays of the National Health Service altogether.

There are now techniques which make it less and less necessary to involve doctors and hospitals at all, if you get going soon enough, as the self-help groups of women in America have shown. And almost all the nasty statistics and gruesome live-foetus stories involve late, complicated hospital abortions: not the swift vacuum or menstrual extractions that can be done without ever getting involved with the medical hierarchy and the male medical conscience at all.

The argument about abortion is not, I am beginning to realize, just about birth and conception and septicaemia and fertility. It's also about whether the medical profession should have a monopoly over our physical lives. It's part of a wider tide that's flowing: a growing feeling that the big white hospitals and the chaps with the gleaming machines don't have all the answers to life or death or even health after all.

More and more people are wondering about other ways of ordering their health: they turn to tweakers and speakers, herbs and biorhythms, to bending spoons or bones or minds: latest convert from the purely scientific is of all people Bernard Dixon, renowned editor of New Scientist, who has come to realize, with so many others, that in the long run the only person who can run a healthy body may be its owner-driver. And this person has a right to seek help in the servicing of it from any garage, chapel or wisewomen who can help; not just from the AA, I mean BMA, approved mechanical centres.

I don't often vote the straight feminist ticket, but with the phrase "Our bodies, Our selves" they got it absolutely dead right. If men are also beginning to want more control over their own bodies, I wish them nothing but well. In the meantime, I'll settle for them just leaving our bodies to us.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose sharply in mid-afternoon trading today. Activity was moderate.

Trading in shares of Asbestos Corp. resumed at the opening following a halt Wednesday. The Quebec Superior Court rejected a request by the company for an injunction to prevent a possible expropriation by the Quebec government. The company will appeal the ruling.

Asbestos Corp.'s stock gained 2 to $43 by 2 p.m.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 10:50 a.m. was 2,105,117 shares.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Thursday as euphoria over the nomination of a new Federal Reserve Board chairman wore off and the government provided new evidence that inflation is still a major problem.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down today, backing off a gain of 9.73 Wednesday, when the market reacted favorably to the naming of Paul Volcker to the powerful post of Federal Reserve chairman.

London

The Financial Times index was down 3.1 to 461.3.

Industrials and oils declined while golds were mixed.

CALGARY (CP) — The chairman of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana warned this week that Canadians and Mexicans should be cautious about U.S. suggestions for continental energy-sharing.

Chairman John Swearingen told a news conference that such a continentalist approach may well be in the U.S. interest, but its two neighbors have their own interests to serve.

"Americans must recognize that Canada and Mexico are separate nations."

The day before, U.S. Senator Ted Kennedy had urged formation of a common North American energy market, saying that oil-rich Mexico in particular represents a "new Saudi Arabia."

However, Swearingen said it is unlikely Mexico has such volumes of producible oil.

The Standard chief, who is also chairman of the American Petroleum Institute, said Mexico has 25 million to 30 million barrels of proved oil reserves, roughly equal to U.S. reserves and three times Canada's total.

He estimated that maximum Mexican production might be four million to five million barrels a day, compared with current world consumption of 50 million barrels, but added that large-scale production would take a long time to develop.

Also, Mexican authorities would probably produce at substantially less than the maximum rate.

Carter's energy policy, he said, "grossly neglected" the need to encourage production of domestic U.S. oil.

"I hope that before Congress enacts President Carter's announced program into law that they will remedy this deficiency."

U.S. oil and gas production could be raised 25 per cent in five years "if the industry were given the money to drill the necessary wells."

In addition to failing to provide economic incentives, he said, the U.S. government is discouraging domestic production with excessive environcental regulations and by banning exploration in huge wilderness areas.

Meanwhile, he said, offshore sources of oil continue to be unreliable.

A cut in Iran's production to four million barrels a day from six million had caused world-wide problems and "I for one do not believe the revolution in Iran is over."

If Iran's oil production is halted, he said, "what we've seen up to now will be child's play."

Swearingen, whose board of directors held a meeting at the Calgary headquarters of Amoco Canada Petroleum Co. Ltd., a wholly-owned subsidiary, said the board reviewed Amoco's experiments in the Alberta oil sands.

C.M. McLean takeover seen

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I. (CP) — The Journal-Pioneer says controlling interest in C.M. McLean Ltd., Prince Edward Island's largest food processor, has been purchased by the Irving interests of New Brunswick.

The newspaper quotes what it calls a usually reliable source as saying a McLean plant at Sherwood, P.E.I., near Charlottetown, is being closed and a new corporate head office established at Moncton, N.B.

J.K. Irving, said to be the new controlling shareholder, was not available for comment. An official at McLean's other plant in New Annan, P.E.I., said he had no comment but a statement was expected to be made Thursday.

The newspaper says C.M. McLean and Mitchell McLean of Charlottetown would no longer be associated with the operation, which employs more than 600 persons at peak periods and processes a variety of farm produce, including potatoes.

The McLean firm has a contract to supply french fries to the MacDonalds chain of fast-food outlets in Canada.

The newspaper says employees at the Charlottetown-area plant were advised in the last few days to report to New Annan for employment but that few have done so.

It also says that during March the McLean firm encountered a temporary problem honoring payment for a number of potato contracts but that these were eventually paid off.

A MOST UNUSUAL STEREO . . .

These Toshiba and Goodmans fine audio components represent remarkable sound for your money. The Toshiba SA-725 Stereo Receiver has more than enough power to reproduce your favourite recordings at concert hall levels, and superb FM with PLL circuitry. We've selected the (RV-20's from Goodmans of England) for this system because of their superior base response and their excellent clarity. Their midrange driver ensures that an oboe will sound like an oboe rather than a french horn with a nasal condition.
Like we said — an unusually good sounding system, for an unusually reasonable price.

FROM A MOST UNUSUAL STORE

At Cav, We're not in the race to see who can shove the most cartons over the sales counter each week. We're here to help you select the stereo components that will sound best for you, on your favourite music. We're in the basement — in Maynard Court, behind the Odeon Theatre. You'll find us there Tuesday thru Saturday — 10 to 5:30 — 'til 9 p.m. Fridays, or phone us at 388-6564.

During the last parliament, four Social Credit MLAs were exonerated by a committee of the legislature of having accepted money from the government in violation of the Constitution Act.

The New Democratic Party opposition boycotted the hearings, saying the matter should be in the hands of the courts. The bill makes it clear that any charges by MLAs under the act must be made to the legislature.

Also abolished is the $500-a-day fine which could be imposed on any member for each day he sat in the house or voted while ineligible.

The bill also changes the definition of the leader of a recognized political party so that the party must hold at least four seats before its leader can be accorded the higher wage and extra privileges.

Victoria businessman Doug Lewis, past president of the Downtown Victoria Association, called the 31 per cent pay hike "a little wild" in view of government requests for pay restraint.

Labor spokesman Larry Ryan, however, said he believed the increase was justified because government salaries had fallen behind both the private and public sector.

Is Hope disguised Scarlet?

To retired haberdasher Don Straith of 2840 Beach, Bob Hope is really the Scarlet Pimpernel in disguise.

The comedian arrived in Victoria with a golfing buddy on Wednesday, and they headed off for the Victoria Golf Club where they met Straith.

The trio played 14 holes and Straith said Hope did extremely well. It was Hope's first outing after an eight-week layoff ordered by his doctor for a sore shoulder.

Hope was spotted at a Greek restaurant Wednesday night, but when Straith was contacted this morning, he didn't know what Hope was going to do today.

"He's like the Scarlet Pimpernel," Straith said. "You never know what he's thinking or what he's going to do."

Hope suggested he might go fishing today. Then again, Hope waffled, he might want another golf game. Of course, business in Palm Springs could force him to return to California.

By 10:30 a.m. today, Straith was convinced Hope had left Victoria.

Straith recalled that it was his father, George, who had first played with golf with Hope in Palm Springs. Hope promised to visit Victoria, but the elder Straith died before Hope ever made it.

When Hope finally arrived for his first Victoria golf date, he publicly acknowledged that he was fulfilling his promise to George Straith. Hope has made it to Victoria many times since.

Chase ends in charges

A 19-year-old motorcyclist was to appear in provincial court today charged with dangerous driving following a police chase in the city early this morning.

A police spokesman said a patrol officer saw the cyclist go through a red light at Fernwood and Yates at 3:13 a.m. and chased him at speeds up to 140 km/h for 3½ kilometres before finally stopping him at Clover Point and Dallas.

A second patrol car was called in to assist in the arrest.

The spokesman said officers had difficulty subdueing the youth and while they struggled to put handcuffs on him the windshield of one of the police cars was cracked.

Ill mayor on mend

The mayor has been resting comfortably since being taken to hospital Monday with severe abdominal pains.

Whistler act a monster—NDP

the association through its own financial input will work with the existing municipality of Whistler without being a tax burden on the local citizens, Williams said.

Other Socreds admit the society will be given special powers, but say that's the only way to encourage them to spend the more than $100 million needed to turn the area into a world-class ski resort.

Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria) who led the opposition attack, said tremendous profits will be funneled straight into the U.S.

The main developer — Fortress Mountain Resorts Ltd. — is 50 per cent owned by the movie-making giant 20th Century Fox. (One NDP-er said the bill was drafted by "19th century foxes" on the Socred side of the house).

The bill also sets an "incredible and dangerous precedent" by handing a private corporation taxing authority, Barber said.

And it flies in the face of democratic principles by requiring individual homeowners or small businesses to join the association whether they want to or not, Barber said.

And everyone who is caught up in this "giant cartel" is denied the basic protection offered all other individuals under the Municipal Act.

The super society isn't even responsible to the inspector of municipalities, Barber said.

The only redress for those who feel wronged by the association is through the Supreme Court.

"What possible motive is involved," he asked. "Why do they want these exemptions if everything they plan to do is above board?"

He wondered if it is possible some of the major investors didn't want their connections — political or otherwise — open to public scrutiny.

"No straightforward company would ever ask for such exemptions. No straightforward government would ever grant them," he shouted across the floor.

Barber called on the government to have the good sense to withdraw the bill, but added it was a hopeless request because the Socreds are "too much in hock to their supporters and friends."

The NDP noted that when the ski resort is operating next year, some 10,000 skiers a day will be paying $11 each. That $110,000 daily is slated for the big developers, mostly from the U.S., they say, and asked why the area wasn't publicly developed so the profits would return to the public purse.

Some 5,000 little pieces of colored glass have to be removed, cleaned, replaced where missing, and put back in this stained glass dome in the Hook Sin Tong Charity building on Herald Street. The oval dome is the largest of its kind in Canada.

A painstaking puzzle in repairing glass dome

A jigsaw puzzle of some 5,000 pieces of colored glass — with many pieces missing — is a two-month restoration job for John McMillan at a 75-year-old Chinatown heritage building.

The Hook Sin Tong Charity building at 600 Herald is being restored by the department of heritage conservation, and stained glass artist McMillan, 28, has the painstaking task of dissembling, repairing and rebuilding one of Canada's largest non-insititutional stained glass domes.

The unusual oval dome measures 12 by 15 feet and stands more than six feet high atop the three-storey building, protected by an exterior skylight.

One of the 20 segments was nearly a total shambles, while in many others numerous replacements were required using modern glass with unavoidable color variations.

McMillan said each section of the dome must be taken apart individually, laid out flat and reassembled using new lead, then curved and re-puttied on a specially-built plywood mould where it hardens into shape.

He manhandles each segment in and out of position singlehandedly, from staging 15 feet above the society's clubroom floor.

The original job would have cost about $2,000, one-tenth the cost of replacement today, McMillan estimated.

Similar restoration work has been done by McMillan for the government at the Legislative Buildings and at courthouses in Prince Rupert and Prince George, and in Victoria churches.

Refugee funding organized

The Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday to co-ordinate donations from municipalities and electoral areas to help the Inter-cultural Association of Greater Victoria resettle refugees from Vietnam.

Saanich alderman John Mika made the appeal and said the association would work out of its office at 415-20 View Street, helping the refugees get over their "culture shocks" and giving information to individuals.

He asked for a total of $3,800 and said Saanich has committed itself to $1,000. Victoria has already voted to donate $1,500 and Oak Bay, $278.

It was pointed out that electoral areas have no contingency funds like municipalities and it was suggested that the provincial government might fund the electoral areas' share of $735.

Mika said the Capital Regional District could expect about 600 refugees snd that the provincial government is expected to debate spending $500,000 on the refugees's resettlement.

Housing awaits 10 Viet families

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will provide accommodation for about 10 Indochinese families as soon as the refugees can get to Victoria, a local CMHC spokesman said today.

Ray Pitt said an additional 30 families will get accommodation up-Island.

Locally, the 10 families will be scattered among all four municipalities, if possible.

"We want to spread the refugees around a wide area to give them the best chance to assimilate into the community," he said.

"If they congregate in one area they will have difficulty finding work."

The refugees, known as the boat people because they have not been granted permission to land anywhere in Asia, will be housed in units repossessed by CMHC. The units are in low-rent apartment and row housing developments.

The number of refugees coming to Victoria would depend upon the size of the families but it probably would not be more than 40 people because the units are no larger than three bedrooms. Some are only two bedrooms.

Federal Economic Expansion Minister Elmer Mackay, who is in charge of CMHC, said about 3,000 housing units will be available.

"We are attempting to help out so that the fairly large number of refugees coming into the country won't have to worry about having a roof over their heads," he said.

Canada announced last week it intended to triple its quota of Indochinese refugees and would take almost 16,000 by the end of the year and as many as 50,000 by the end of 1980.

Maximum rent for the units that have been repossessed by CMHC after owners defaulted on mortgage payments will not exceed $200 during the first six months.

The rent will cover the government's carrying expenses.

"We're not looking at the option of making money from these people," Mackay said. "We wanted to help and provide accommodation that is now sitting empty."

After six months, the refugees will have the first option to buy the homes or pay the market rent.

"Quite possibly some of the refugees will want to stay while others will get their feet under them, find jobs and want to find another place to stay," MacKay said.

About 1,000 of the units are in Montreal and the suburbs of Longueuil and Laval. Another 500 units are located in Mississauga, 300 in Toronto, 200 in Oshawa and 300 in Hamilton. There are 100 units in Vancouver and Ottawa.

CRD set to block Saanich

The Capital Regional District will take Saanich to court before Aug. 6 in an attempt to quash the Tillicum shopping centre bylaw.

The action will be taken unless it receives a letter saying the municipality will agree to terms set down at the July 11 meeting of the regional board.

The terms include Saanich's promise not to consider any similar shopping centre, such as the proposed Broadmead complex, until the regional plan has been amended.

Until then, any municipality or electoral area contemplating a shopping centre of more than 100,000 square feet must apply to the regional board.

The decision to go ahead with legal proceedings was made Wednesday after Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier refused to stop proceedings on the 229,000 square foot Broadmead complex until the issue is settled.

(The developers envision the centre growing to 411,000 square feet over the next 10 to 15 years.)

Directors empowered board chairman Murray Glazier to cancel legal proceedings should Saanich change its stand.

Saanich had been asked to make a commitment before Wednesday. Instead, after a special council meeting on Tuesday Saanich submitted the following resolution to the CRD.

"Council is pleased to endorse the principle of restricting the size of regional shopping centres but request the CRD staff make a study which will examine the problems of definition and recognize the function, range of services, sphere of influence and prime major tenants."

Couvelier was repeatedly told by directors that the 100,000 square foot figure in the regional plan was merely an index, indicating at what size a shopping centre should be studied by the regional board regarding its impact on the district.

Sooke director Charles Perkins said he deplored the need for the CRD to take action against one of its components and asked if Saanich would change its stand.

Couvelier said if Saanich could be assured that the Broadmead project would be accepted there would be no problem.

He gained board approval in a motion to have ammendments to the regional plan completed and before the board by the end of September.

Ask the Times

Q. We were watching the hang-gliders on Dallas Road and wondered if it is a new sport. How old is it? N.G.

A. The first hang-glider was designed by Sir George Cayley, who died in 1857. It carried his coachman about 500 yards across a valley near Brompton Hall, North Yorkshire, Britain, in the summer of 1853.

Q. Is it true that cats are used by the civil service in Britain? B.B.

A. Yes. Out of a total population of 4,200,000 an estimated 100,000 are "employed" by the civil service.

Police board muzzles chief

Central Saanich police board has passed a resolution requiring its chairman to clear all news releases falling within police board policy.

The action was taken at a board meeting Wednesday night and follows an article that appeared in the Times June 28 in which Chief Bob Miles released statistics pointing out a dramatic increase in the crime rate in the municipality in recent years.

Miles said he needed four more officers to handle the problem and would be making the request to the board at a meeting on June 27.

Butler said she was upset with the article, not so much by what was said as by the fact the Times had received the information before the board.

There were reports that board members, at a meeting earlier this month, had discussed a motion to censure the chief for releasing the information.

Bulter would neither confirm nor deny that such a discussion had taken place.

No censure motion was passed.

Butler said today Miles is free to talk about normal police matters including crime rates and police programs.

She wouldn't elaborate on what specific police board matters would have to be cleared through her.

Preserve Chinatown, Wright urges

As member of an ad hoc committee studying a recently completed survey of Chinatown, Wright said it is important to the people of Victoria and for the tourist industry to save or bring back the image of the oldest Chinese community on the coast.

"We still have buildings that haven't been destroyed, still with alleys and interesting places, the shells of buildings that can be brought back and made exciting for the people of Victoria and the tourists," Wright said.

A boundary should be determined, within which the cultural identity of Chinatown can be restored.

"I think it can be done with the co-operation of the city, the community and the senior government," the alderman said.

But it should not be ethnically directed, he said. The project should strive for cultural and historical identity rather than an ethnic community.

Wright said it should not be necessary to confine development and business ventures to Chinese owners and entrepreneurs, "as long as the feeling and identity of Chinatown is represented.

"The important thing is, let's get on with the job. We have to show the Chinese community it's not rhetoric, but really important to Victoria," Wright said.

He expected the committee would have firm recommendations for city council before the end of August. Members have discussed the report prepared by University of Victoria geographer Dr. David Lai and are due to meet again next week.

Wright called Lai's study an excellent and detailed review of Chinatown's status and prospects. It has also been presented to the Advisory Planning Commission and Heritage Advisory Committee at a gathering that included members of the Chinese community.

Among the principal points made in the report are the suggestion that long-term hospital care be provided on the site of the former Chinese Hospital, and that a Chinese community centre would focus social and cultural activities.

There should also be beautification, urban design and greater opportunity for permanent residence.

Lai said a modest but important first step would be to provide the area with its first curbside trash containers.

Rocks, A's tie in thriller

By Bill Walker
Times Staff

Coach Bob Salt of Coquitlam Adanacs said earlier this season he expected his Coquitlam Adanacs and Victoria Shamrocks would be the two clubs that would determine the Western Lacrosse Association championship this year. And that, in his opinion, there was little to choose between the two clubs.

After Wednesday night's game here, he had little reason to change his mind.

The Adanacs and Shamrocks played to a 17-17 overtime tie in one of the finest games of the season with the tie probably more of a disappointment to Coquitlam which led most of the way.

Both clubs played it wide open, forechecked the length of the floor and hit hard but cleanly with only 10 minutes in penalties being charged to each team.

If there weren't enough thrills during the game, the final minute of the third period packed enough for most games.

With the score tied at 15-15, Kevin Alexander, who had been more or less blanketed by the Adanacs, finally broke loose. Larry Bell hit him with a floor-length pass. Alexander deked John Lewis in the Coquitlam goal, shot and the Rocks were ahead 16-15 with only 29 seconds to go.

But the A's weren't through. They got the draw and Dave Durante, a tower of strength all night, fired a sizzler past Shamrock goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer with only six seconds to play to tie the score.

And that's the way it stayed although the Rocks got a great chance when Art Talson drew a penalty for Coquitlam with only 55 seconds to play. But they couldn't connect on the power play in face of a stiff Adanac defence that didn't allow one power-play goal all night.

Until that final minute, it had been Coquitlam mostly in command and the Shamrocks playing catch-up. Only twice did the Rocks have the lead in regulation time, at 8-7 in the final minute of the first period and at 16-15 in the final minute of the third.

Coquitlam broke on top with Dave Durante scoring in four seconds and the A's getting three goals in the first two minutes and three seconds with Scott Marshall in goal for the Rocks. He was replaced by Smeltzer with the score 3-1 for Coquitlam. Victoria finally forged to the front at the end of the period, but not for long.

Coquitlam ran in five consecutive goals before the Irish replied in the second and led 12-10 after two.

In the third the Rocks didn't get even until Bob Cool scored at 13:49 and Steve Buckley at 16:35. Then Alexander got his second only to be matched by Durante seconds later.

Cool and junior recruit Jim Boyd each had three goals for the Irish. Dan Green, Rick Baker, Jim Lynch, Buckley and Alexander each had a pair while Bill Marechek had a single.

Smeltzer made 54 saves for the Rocks, Marshall two, while Lewis stopped 40 shots for the A's and Greg Thomas eight.

Shamrocks gained the most out of the game as the single point put them alone in first place, one point head of the idle New Westminster Salmonbellies while Coquitlam is in third place, four points behind the Bellies.

Shamrocks next action is Friday night at Nanaimo when the play a postponed game and the last 12:26 of a game suspended in May when the referee was injured.

It was also announced that the Rocks had dropped plans to protest the Burrards game in Vancouver Tuesday night. An examination of the scoresheet showed the game officials were correct in their call on a mixup over a delayed penalty.

Stampeders too tough

By The Canadian Press

Calgary Stampeders were physically superior, Montreal Alouettes broke down, Hamilton Tiger-Cats reached a milestone and Saskatchewan Roughriders were embarrassed in two Canadian Football League interlocking games Wednesday night.

Montreal coach Joe Scannella said a tough Calgary defence "broke us down" as the Stampeders defeated the Alouettes 19-7 before 51,237 fans in Olympic Stadium.

In Regina, Saskatchewan coach Ron Lancaster couldn't understand why the Roughriders, after scoring 20 points in the first half, were shut down in the second half and wound up losing 24-20 to the Tiger-Cats.

"We had too many sacks . . . we just broke down," Scannella said of Montreal's second defeat in three games.

A 22-yard pass from quarterback John Hufnagel to wide receiver Tom Forzani in the third quarter produced the only touchdown in the game. J. T. Hay kicked three field goals, converted the touchdown and had two singles for Calgary, which also got a single from Mike McTague. Montreal, ahead 6-2 at halftime, managed a pair of field goals by Don Sweet and a single by Wally Buono.

"A lot of people thought we would come in here, and with the warm weather, just fold up our tents," said Stampeders coach Jack Gotta.

"But I thought we were physically superior. Our guys were so keyed up to play well and to do well that we were a little nervous in the first half. I think we just made up our minds what we had to do and the defence came on and took hold."

Scannella said he's finally made up his mind about quarterbacks.

"Joe Barnes will be the No. 1 quarterback, Gerry (Dattilio) will be backup and Ron (Calcagni) will be backup." All three saw action Wednesday night.

The Tiger-Cats, down 20-7 after three quarters, scored 17 points in the last seven minutes of the game to snatch victory away from Saskatchewan.

Hamilton coach John Payne said it was one of the first times the Tiger-Cats have come from behind, a badly-needed first win of the season.

Neil Lumsden and quarterback Dave Marler scored fourth-quarter touchdowns as the Eastern Conference Tiger-Cats picked up their first win in three regular-season outings. Lumsden collected three field goals, two converts and a single.

Mike Strickland created short-lived visions of victory for Saskatchewan with two first-quarter touchdowns. Bob Macoritti converted both and kicked two field goals.

Best best Canadian

BISLEY, England (CP) — Bob Best, a Vancouver teacher, is the leading Canadian, well up in the top sector of the leader board, with just one competition to go for the over-all Bisley shooting championship.

Britain's Arthur Clarke, in top position so solidly that nothing short of disaster can stop him winning the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association Challenge Shield — the championship award, has dropped only 14 points during the week, counting 516 out of a possible 530.

Best, captain of the Canadian cadet team here 10 years ago and musketry officer for the 72nd Seaforth Cadets of B.C., is 10th with a loss of only 22 points.

Sgt. Clement Pommerleau, Royal 22nd, is the top Canadian Forces marksman, only one point behind Best.

Long 10th in gymnastics

MOSCOW (CP) — Day six of the Spartakiad Games dawned clear and brighter for Canadian prospects.

Susan Natrass of Waterloo, Ont., moved up to 11th position in trap shooting and three gymnasts qualified for the finals.

Warren Long of Victoria finished 10th in the all-round final that included three Soviets and 15 foreigners.

Monica Goermann of Winnipeg finished ninth in the opening rounds and advanced to the finals. Carmen Alie of Montreal also advanced.

Tobacco wins with best time

ANGERS, France — Judy Tobacco of Victoria won the 400 metres with a personal best time of 54.57 seconds Wednesday to help highlight the Canadian junior track and field team performance at an open international track meet.

15th lucky for Mariners

By The Associated Press

Fourteen times in their three-year existence the Mariners took the field at Memorial Stadium in Baltimore. Fourteen times they lost.

This time, they seemed to have found a new way to be beaten by red-hot Baltimore, which had won seven consecutive games.

Leading 5-3 after scoring three times in the seventh, two on Ruppert Jones's double, the Mariners saw the skies open and a thunderous deluge force a halt to play. If play hadn't resumed, the score would have reverted to the previous full inning, making it 3-2, in favor of Baltimore.

" The longer it rained," said Jones, "the more I thought it would really be something if they pulled another one out. I thought, 'Here we go again.'"

After 63 minutes of anxious waiting for the Mariners, the game resumed. Seattle survived, but not before some more anxious moments in the bottom of the ninth.

Baltimore had closed within 5-4 and Doug DeCinces opened the ninth with a double. An infield out and a walk put runners on first and third. But pinch-runner Mark Belanger was forced at second, DeCinces holding third, after third baseman Dan Meyer dropped Kiko Garcia's high pop. Al Bumbry then grounded into a game-ending force.

The Cleveland Indians' left-hander, who'd lost four straight games since he got married in June and five straight over-all, pitched a two-hitter in blanking Minnesota Twins 2-0 Wednesday.

"I had lost some confidence but never really lost the will to win," said Waits, Cleveland's top starter the last three American League baseball seasons. "I have a deep relationship with Jesus Christ and he never let me give up. Yet I struggled."

In other games, Boston Red Sox bombed Oakland A's 16-4, California Angels beat New York Yankees 9-5, Toronto Blue Jays downed Texas Rangers 8-3, Detroit Tigers whipped Milwaukee Brewers 11-2 and Chicago White Sox topped Kansas City Royals 6-2. The Angels, in winning, may also have lost.

California's Nolan Ryan lasted one inning. He struck out two men to move within one of Jim Bunning, who is fourth on the all-time list with 2,855, then felt something pop in his arm while pitching to Reggie Jackson in the second and departed. He was sent back to California for x-rays.

Joe Rudi knocked in three runs and Dan Ford had three hits for California, which stretched its first-place lead in the West Division to three games over Minnesota.

Jim Rice hit two mammoth home runs, Carlton Fisk also homered and Boston had 19 hits, its biggest offensive outburst this season. Rice had three hits and five runs batted in. Dave Revering had three hits and a homer for Oakland.

Mussels edged in ninth inning

BELLINGHAM — Mike Codiroli raced home on an infield grounder by clubmate Kevin King for the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning Wednesday as Bellingham Mariners edged Victoria Mussels 3-2 in Northwest League baseball action.

It proved to be a frustrating night for Victoria pitcher John Candiotti, who went the distance and took the loss, it was a frustrating night.

Candiotti had a no-hitter going into the sixth inning and had pitched one-hit ball until the Mariners struck for three consecutive singles in the bottom of the eighth to tie the score at 2-2.

Triangle captures crown

Triangle completed its comeback through the losers' bracket by taking advantage of a few more errors to trip Esquimalt 6-1 and capture the Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship Wednesday at Hampton Park.

It was the second straight win over Esquimalt, which had dropped Triangle into 3-2 earlier in the double-loss elimination tourney.

Errors helped Triangle trip Esquimalt 19-1 on Tuesday and they played a role in the final decision.

Triangle scored five runs with two out in the second inning.

Scott Coulter led off with a walk but Scott Swager of Esquimalt managed to strike out the next two batters.

A pair of miscues kept Triangle alive and a single by Vince Smythe, a double by Mike Coonan and a single by Dan Ruttan brought in the runs.

Darren Murdoch went the distance, striking out seven and walking six, for the victory while Swager struck out nine and walked four.

Esquimalt scored in the fifth inning when Swager drew a walk and both Tony Parks and Don Mowat singled.

Triangle now advances to the British Columbia championship starting Saturday in Prince George.

Lanny close in junior test

KELOWNA — Lanny Sawchuck of Victoria's Uplands was two strokes off pace following the second round of play in the British Columbia junior men's golf championship tournament Wednesday as the Kelowna Golf and Country Club course turned mean.

All but a handful of the 137 golfers shot a higher score in the second round than they did in the first round Tuesday.

Murray Poje of Tsawwassen was one stroke back at 142, having shot a 72 Wednesday.

Four golfers shared third place with 143, including Sawchuck and Grant Barnes of Kelowna, who shared the first-round lead with Brian DeGirolamo of Victoria. Barnes bogied the first four holes Wednesday to balloon to 74 and DeGirolamo carded an 80 to slip well back into the pack.

Also at 143 were Glen Heuser of Kelowna and Rick Gibson of Vancouver. Brian O'Keefe of Vernon and Ken Sherstobitoff of Castlegar were tied at 146.

"I lost a ball in a tree on the first hole and that didn't help matters any," he said. "After the first four holes, I had to settle down and all things considered I didn't do too badly.

"At least I'm close to the lead and that's where I was hoping to be at this stage of the tournament."

Most of the golfers said temperatures in the mid 30s affected their games.

The field was cut to the low 100 and ties and will be cut to low 50 and ties after today's round. Cutoff point Wednesday was 165.

Lawson second

VANCOUVER (CP) — Defending champion Colleen McCulloch of Vancouver fired a six-over-par 80 Wednesday to grab the first round lead in the British Columbia senior women's golf championship.

McCulloch had a two-shot advantage over Joan Lawson of Victoria. Betty McIntosh of Vancouver and Margaret Todd of Victoria were another stroke back after shooting 83s.

Three golfers — Lorraine Mackenzie of Vancouver, Isabel Rudd of Coquitlam and Jan Annable of West Vancouver — shot 84s.

The final round on the 5,886-yard, par 74 Point Grey golf course will be played today.

First four semi-finalists decided in Times meet

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

NOREEN WALMSLEY

PEGGY HOWES
. . . women's singles

Well, after weeks of playing and some pretty exciting matches, we have for you photos of the first four players to reach the semi-finals in the sixth annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament — although they're not in the same event.

Friends and neighbors Peggy Howes and Noreen Walmsley have made it through to the last four in the women's singles while Angela Kolic and Joan Thomas are in the junior girls' semi-finals.

Way back when the first-round draw was made out, I got an urgent call from Noreen. Quite by accident, she had been drawn to play Peggy.

"We play together two or three times a week and I've never beaten her yet," Noreen explained, saying she wasn't worried so much about losing but would like a chance to play someone different.

So we did a bit of shuffling and the two women ended up on opposite sides of the draw. They could still meet, though, if both win their next matches when the semi-finals of all five events are played (starting at noon) on Saturday, Aug. 18, at Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts.

Finals (also starting at noon) will be played the next day and will be followed by the presentation of prizes to all winners and runners-up and of a new tennis racquet (courtesy of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora) to each champion.

For Peggy Howes this is the second time in the popular Times tourney, the only event designed exclusively not for club players but for those who play mainly on parks courts and which, with 255 entries, is the biggest tennis tournament on the Island. She went out in the second round of the singles last summer but this time she has been a lot more successful.

As well as reaching the women's semi-finals, Peggy and husband Don upset top-seeded youngsters Kerry Chan and Charlayne Joe (runners-up last year) to make it into the quarter-finals of the mixed doubles.

This is the first try in the Times tourney for Noreen and already she's impressed.

"I play quite often but I only play Peggy," she explained. "This kind of tournament enables you to meet a lot more players of your own standard and I hope the Times keeps it going."

Angela Kolic is also having a better season than she did in her first try in the Times tourney last year. A graduate of Colquitz Junior High, she hopes to be on the tennis team when she goes into Grade 11 at Spectrum High this fall.

★ ★ ★

Joan Thomas, who now meets Angela in the girls' semi-finals, is a graduate of Oak Bay High who works in a pharmacy. She has been playing tennis for five years but this is the first tournament she has ever entered.

"I just play for fun," she said with a big smile. "I saw it in the paper and thought I'd give it a try."

The men's field has been whittled down from 118 players to 16 with top-seeded Perry Evans (twice a semi-finalist and a former boys' singles champ) and dark horse Andrew Blair looking the most impressive so far. Both won their third-round matches, 6-0, 6-0.

Brothers Lorne and Kerry Chan are both still in and a couple of juniors already eliminated from a high-class boys' singles field — John Zanic and Glenn Johnston — have ousted men who reached the quarter-finals last year. Zanic beat Peter Harrison, 6-0, 6-3, while Johnston had a tougher time knocking out Robert Molson, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

There have been plenty of tough games and the closest encounter of the third round was William Stevenson's 6-1, 3-6, 8-6 win over Kevin Burr.

Probably the most successful competitor overall so far, though, has to be young Richard Folk. Rick has reached the quarter-finals of the junior boys' singles, defeated Roman Spanier, 6-3, 7-5, to make it into the last 16 of the men's event and partnered Angela Kolic to a 6-1, 6-4 win over Terry Wong and Helen Argue to reach the quarter-finals of the mixed doubles.

Coe shot a final round one-over-par 76 to finish the 36-hole tournament with a nine-over-par 159. Callan finished two strokes back with 161 after shooting an 81 in the final round.

First-round leader Jill Johnson of Ganges slipped to a nine-over-par 84 to lose the four-shot lead she held on Coe after Tuesday's opening round.

The victory kept Coe's record of only two losses on the junior tour this summer intact.

Five women were chosen to travel to Dartmouth, N.S. to represent B.C. in the Canadian junior girls team championship.

Coe, Callan, and Linda Jervis of Pitt Meadows are the starters on the team, while Johnson and Lynn Westnedge of Kimberley are alternates.

Tally-Ho stages upset

Jay Tuson hit a run-producing triple and Paul Kraeling drove in another run with a double as Tally-Ho came up with all its scoring in the fourth inning.

In Victoria Senior Women's League play at Hyacinth Park, Vera Chiu slammed a two-run triple in the seventh inning to give VI 90 Vicettes a 5-3 victory over previously-unbeaten Stockers North Americans and Bemister's Welding trimmed Island Dryco Breakers, 5-2.

Chiu's blast drove in both the tying and winning runs and helped Sandy Milliken, who threw a five-hitter.

At Heywood Avenue Park, Remco Office Systems edged Brentwood 6-5 in a Heywood Men's League contest.

Cosmos top farmers

Dean Potter fired a five-hitter Wednesday to lead Cosmopolitans to a 7-3 upset victory over Farmer Construction in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

The win helped boost Comos to within a game and a half of third-place Capital Radiators and the final play-off berth. Capitals, however, have three games in hand over Cosmos.

Kirk Wenzel cracked a three-run homer to lead the Cosmo attack.

Farmers dropped back into a tie for first place with Lumberworld with the loss.

Whitecaps win rough test to stretch lead over Aztecs

Times News Services

Trevor Whymark's goal off a rebound in the 74th minute was all the Vancouver Whitecaps needed to defeat Tulsa in a bitter North American Soccer League match at Vancouver Wednesda night.

Forty-two fouls were called by referee Paul Avis, 26 of them against Tulsa.

The Whitecaps applied relentless pressure and limited the Roughnecks to just one direct shot on goalkeeper Phil Parkes, whose shutout was his second in a row and sixth of the season.

The victory lifted first-place Vancouver 15 points ahead of Los Angeles Aztecs in the Western Division of the National Conference.

Meanwhile, Giorgio Chinaglia, the New York Cosmos soccer star, had ample grounds for self-satisfaction.

The Cosmos striker notched his 24th and 25th goals of the season, snapping an unaccustomed two-game drought, to lead the North American Soccer League champions to a 4-1 victory over Minnesota Kicks.

In the process Chinaglia moved back in front of Oscar Fabbiani of Tampa Bay Rowdies for the NASL scoring lead, 55 points to 53.

In Anaheim, Calif., striker Gerd Mueller exploded for four goals to lead Fort Lauderdale Strikers to a 6-3 triumph over California Surf.

In other NASL games, Edmonton Drillers surprised Dallas Tornado 4-0, Philadelphia Fury defeated Toronto Blizzard 4-1, Atlanta Chiefs upset Houston Hurricaine 2-1, San Jose Earthquakes beat Chicago Sting 3-2 and Washington Diplomats beat Seattle Sounders 2-1 in a shootout.

Before the judge

A 22-year-old man who stole lottery tickets from his employer, including one which contained a $1,000 instant bonus prize, was given a year in jail Wednesday.

Michael Joseph Poulos appeared in Victoria provincial court before Judge Fred Green and pleaded guilty to two counts of theft over $200 and one count of breach of probation.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith told the court Poulos began employment as a salesman at Loto-Com, at 710 Market Street, on July 12.

Five days later, Poulos was the last to leave the office and when staff came to work the next day, they discovered 37 Loto Canada tickets missing along with $60 of the petty cash.

Poulos had taken the money and made a $60 deposit for one day's rental of a Monte Carlo at Budget Rent-A-Car. Smith said the car was to be returned the next day at 3 p.m.

When Poulos failed to return with the vehicle by July 18, one day past due, it was reported stolen.

On July 19, Poulos was stopped in the rental vehicle at Tabor, Alta. He told police he was heading for Montreal.

Included in the 37 stolen lottery tickets, Smith added, was one containing The Provincial "Superprize" of $1,000, which Poulos cashed in Alberta. He also had a $10 bonus ticket as well as five "free" tickets, Smith added.

Poulos was convicted in Victoria on Feb. 27 this year of three counts of false pretences and was given a suspended sentence and one year's probation. One of the conditions in that probation, Smith said, was that Poulos remain in the province of B.C.

Defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie said Poulos made no sales during his employment with Loto-Com and he was paid on a commission basis. MacKenzie said the temptation was just too great for his client.

Green imposed one-year, concurrent terms for the theft charges and 30 days concurrent for the breach of probation.

Green remanded a 33-year-old man in custody until Aug. 1 for preparation of a pre-sentence report and sentencing in connection with a July 16 car chase over a 14 kilometre course.

Robert Allan Duff, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to theft over $200, criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle and driving while suspended.

Court was told the incident began about 8:50 p.m. when police at the intersection of the Trans Canada Highway and Tillicum spotted a green Jaguar reported stolen 15 minutes earlier by a man who left the keys in the ignition while taking parcels into his residence.

Police turned on their emergency equipment but Duff and another man in the vehicle ignored it, weaving in and out of traffic and reaching speeds of 120 km/h in an 80 km/h zone.

RCMP set up a roadblock near the Thetis Lake overpass and the Jaguar came to a stop there, Smith said.

However, as officers were approaching Duff's vehicle, he abruptly made a U-turn and sped off, sparking another high-speed chase, this time attaining speeds of 150 km/h

At one point, Smith said, the pursuing police vehicle rammed the $15,000 Jaguar on the left rear but still failed to stop it. Finally, the car was forced off the highway onto a vacant lot.

Duff had a lengthy criminal record and had also been suspended from driving since June 24, 1978 for failure to pay an Insurance Corporation of B.C. assessment, Smith added.

Defence lawyer Vincent Giles told the court Duff was at the heroin treatment centre at Brannan Lake near Nanaimo two days prior to the incident.

Robert Wayne Perry, 36, jointly charged with Duff on the auto theft count, elected trial by judge and jury and a preliminary hearing date of Dec. 4 was set.

Green imposed a 14-day jail sentence on a 57-year-old Sidney man who pleaded guilty to his second drinking-driving offence in less than five years.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Patrick David Nolan, 26, of 707 Esquimalt, $450; Thomas James Stewart, 72, of 2656 Scott, $400; and Kerry James McCullough, 18, of R.R.7, Munns Road, $75.

In addition, Nolan was fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand and McCullough was ordered to perform 80 hours of community service work.

Socred calls for overhaul of B.C. laws

A major review of the B.C. legal system is needed because of growing public concern that the law is making victims of those it was designed to protect, government backbencher Pat Jordan said Wednesday.

She called for an overhaul of all existing provincial law in a private member's bill called "An Act of Sunshine" introduced at a late sitting of the legislature Tuesday.

"If the bill is approved, it will be the first-ever major review of provincial law to be held in B.C.," Jordan said. "I feel an overhaul is necessary because of growing public concern about a lack of accountability in our legal system.

"There is evidence that the system is making victims of the people it is designed to protect."

Jordan said she is concerned about the accountability problem, growing costs of using the system and "a general public confusion" about how the law is supposed to work for the people.

Her proposed bill calls for a royal commission on justice and legal services to review the provincial justice system and the delivery of legal services.

Composed of four lay people, a policeman, a lawyer and a judge, the commission would recommend amendments to the legal system by June 30 next year.

The bill also stipulates that "at least three" of the commission members would be female.

"I want the commission to hold hearings in at least 15 regions of the province so that the members can obtain opinions and comment from people all over the province," Jordan said. "Problems can vary enormously in different areas."

Jordan said when preparing the groundwork for the bill, she had encountered considerable "grass roots" interest in the proposal from members of the legal profession.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom had already instituted some changes and amendments to existing laws, she said, and her bill merely streamlined the process.

Won't be bullied on ban, says Mair

Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday he will not be bullied into imposing a moratorium on uranium exploration in B.C.

Twenty-one groups have said they may boycott hearings of a royal commission into uranium mining if the government does not impose a moratorium by Aug. 6 — the 34th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima.

"If I were planning a moratorium, it certainly would not be with the view to putting an end to their problem — it would not be in reaction to what they have to say," Mair said.

He said no action will be taken until he receives an interim report from commission chairman Dr. David Bates.

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

LETTERS FOR TODAY, GAME NO. 3 ONLY

V I Y

IMPORTANT!

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

Kaiser's 2nd wife petitions for $8M

LILJA KAISER
. . . plus $3,000 a month

VANCOUVER (CP) — A divorce petition filed by Lilja Kaiser sets a value of about $8 million on her four years as the wife of Edgar F. Kaiser Jr., president of Kaiser Resources Ltd., an oil and coal company based in the East Kootenays.

The petition, filed in British Columbia Supreme Court May 8, lays claim to a third of one million Kaiser Resources shares, worth $25 million and said to be owned by Kaiser, 34.

Named as co-respondent in the action is Sue Haraguchi, 39, a former Kaiser vice-president.

Mrs. Kaiser, 34, a former airline stewardess, says in the petition that two years after the marriage it was agreed that Edgar Kaiser Holdings Ltd. would be set up as a corporate umbrella for her husband's Kaiser shares and that she would hold one-third of the shares.

Kaiser filed a petition May 8 stating that his wife is entitled to half of a more restricted measure of their common property, including a condominium in the West End and an itemized list of furnishings and jewelry.

That petition rejects Mrs. Kaiser's claim to the shares and to half the value of a Vancouver mansion purchased a few months before they separated last July.

The $400,000 home, overlooking English Bay, was demolished in February as part of Kaiser's plan for a larger home on the property.

Through Vancouver lawyer Jack Kowarsky, Mrs. Kaiser says in her petition that she was persuaded to sign away her interest in Edgar Kaiser Holdings Ltd.

The petition says that at incorporation in 1975, she and her husband were the directors of the company and since then Haraguchi has replaced her as a director.

Mrs. Kaiser said in an interview that a decision is expected Friday on her bid in family court for an allowance of $3,000 a month. She now gets $1,000.

In April, her divorce petition says, she also got $20,000 from Kaiser.

The petition estimates Kaiser's annual income at $1.4 million — $1 million of it in dividends from the Kaiser Resources shares, $350,000 in salary as company president and board chairman and $60,000 in trust fund earnings he inherited upon the death of his mother.

The only court ruling in the case so far is a decision to hear both the divorce and property settlement issues simultaneously in B.C. Supreme Court sometime next year.

Mrs. Kaiser said she met Kaiser 10 years ago on a Pan Am flight from Honolulu to Guam.

Kaiser was travelling as an advance man for Richard Nixon on a 1969 tour of Asia during his first year as president of the United States.

Mrs. Kaiser said she didn't know then that Kaiser, then 23, was an heir to the Kaiser industrial fortune.

In 1973, Kaiser divorced his first wife, Caroline, and married Lilja in Sweden in October, 1974.

MP, Chilean plan to fly east for last-ditch plea

VANCOUVER (CP) — Chilean refugee Galindo Madrid will fly to Ottawa Monday to present his case for refuge in Canada to Immigration Minister Ron Atkey.

Burnaby MP Svend Robinson, who had harbored Madrid in his home against immigration department attempts to expel him, said he will accompany Madrid.

The New Democratic Party MP said the department sent him a telegram Tuesday assuring him that Madrid, 23, will not be expelled in the immediate future.

The telegram also said Atkey will review the case and the government will help Madrid find a third country that will accept him.

Meanwhile, Bill Clarke (PC—Vancouver-Quadra) also said he would back Madrid's attempts to stay in Canada.

Madrid jumped ship in Squamish in March, 1977. He now works as a dishwasher and lives in Vancouver's West End.

WCB awards 37 claims

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Workers' Compensation Board awarded 37 claims totalling $90,216 and one pension of $409 a month during June under the Criminal Injuries Compensation Act.

The largest claim was a payment of $7,500 and the $409-a-month pension awarded to a 40-year-old Fraser Valley man who was shot in the abdomen by another man.

Remove all industry: report

Industry should be removed from the Campbell River estuary, says a long-awaited joint government report released Wednesday.

The study, however, warns the relocation would cost millions and should be undertaken in such a way as to not adversely affect the economy of the Campbell River area.

The report — compiled by provincial, federal, municipal and regional officials — was completed in March, 1978.

In releasing the report, Chabot said the socio-economic impact of carrying out the recommendations require careful consideration because of the costs involved.

He concludes that as the Campbell River is only one of several similar estuaries, a much broader study to determine long-range requirements of the forest industry must be commissioned.

In a detailed analysis of all the logging operations on the estuary, the report recommends almost without exception that the present industrial leases either be cancelled or not renewed when they expire.

The investigative committee recommends additional government funding be available to help the numerous logging companies in their moves out of the estuary.

But in outlining the ecological desirability of moving the industries the committee cautioned that any move be done "in a manner that guarantees the present social and economic benefits accruing to the Campbell River economy continue in the future."

Chabot said the final solution to the problem will require economic trade-offs but the government must look carefully at the impact of the trade-offs before making any long-range decisions.

The report warns that if the government chooses to relocate the industries, the costs will be substantial. For example, just to move one operation — Raven Lumber — estimates range from between $2 million and $5.7 million.

Marchand placed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Len Marchand, federal environment minister in the previous Liberal government, has accepted a job as administrator for the Nicola Valley Indian Administration, which represents about 1,400 persons in five Indian bands.

Marchand saidhe hopes to start work Aug. 15. He will be responsible for economic, cultural and educational programs.

Marchand was defeated in the Kamloops-Shuswap riding in the May 22 federal election .

Water, pop, salmon and buoyant spirits

VANCOUVER (CP) — As the seven-member crew of The White Eagle paddled away from the burning yacht in the middle of the Pacific, captain Jon Van Tamelen reckoned he was lucky to be alive.

Eight days later, when the Russian whaler Vidnyik found them at sea, he had the same thought again.

"At the time we were picked up, we were 200 to 300 miles off ship channels," he said in a telephone interview Wednesday from Midway Island.

"We were just lucky the whaler came across us and, being a whaler, had a very sharp lookout."

Neither Van Tamelen, 42, of Coquitlam nor yacht owner Lloyd Parker, 62, of West Vancouver know what caused the intensive fire July 12 that melted the ship's aluminum masts and blew through its engine walls.

"It was so intense no one could have gotten into the engine room and still been able to breathe," said Van Tamelen. "I went down with scuba gear and a fire extinguisher and got to the base of the fire when the extinguisher ran out.

"I got another extinguisher and used that. Then I ran out of (scuba) air."

Parker said the crew fought the blaze for 90 minutes, then half the crew began to prepare to abandon ship. When the fire blew through the engine room wall, the crew paddled away in an inflated dinghy.

They did not have time to send a Mayday signal because the electrical system on the yacht was hit first.

They drifted on flat seas for eight days with only a bedsheet sail for power.

"We weren't overdue in Hawaii and it was just luck the trawler saw us," said Parker. "No one knew where we were and we sat between the (ocean-shipping) great circle routes."

They lived on about four ounces of water a person a day and had several bottles of soda pop and eight cans of salmon salvaged from the ship.

"No one despaired," said Van Tamelen. "We just refused to believe we wouldn't be rescued."

En route from Honolulu to Japan, the seven were found about 640 kilometres west of Midway.

The group spent several days aboard the Russian ship before being dropped off at Midway Island Wednesday. They hope to fly to Hawaii today and arrive in Vancouver Friday.

Also aboard the 28-metre yacht were Van Tamelen's 15-year-old son Todd, electrical engineer Donald Holtom, 54, and boutique owner Sara Miller, 48, both of North Vancouver, Anne Mathieson, 34, and nurse Marguerite Mahy, 38, of Vancouver.

All are reported to be in good health.

PNE site gets stadium nod

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greater Vancouver Regional District approved the Pacific National Exhibition grounds Wednesday as the site for a proposed sports stadium and exhibition centre.

The vote came after Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich recommended the PNE site in a letter to the regional district dated July 16. Vancouver city council also has approved the PNE as the site for the proposed $173-million centre, called a muliplex.

The regional district had voted earlier not to become involved in the debate on where a new stadium should be located.

The PNE, in Vancouver's east end, is already the site of Empire Stadium, home ground for the British Columbia Lions of the Canadian Football League and Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League.

However, several other local groups are promoting a downtown location as the site for a new sports stadium.

Funding has not been arranged definitely for either project.

Festival neighbor fights din with dun

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norma Masters painted the town red a couple of nights last week and has sent the tab to organizers of the Sea Festival.

Masters lives in the West End and her apartment is near Alexandra Park, where for five days of the Sea Festival unruly youths caroused, tossed garbage around and played loud music.

Masters said the noise sent her fleeing into the night to seek silence and solace.

She found them, she said, in cafes, cinemas and in singer Tom Jones' live performance at Queen Elizabeth Theatre. The bill came to $57 and it now is in the hands of Sea Festival organizers.

Masters said her outings and the loud Sea Festival participants kept her to four or five hours of sleep a night.

The Sea Festival concluded last weekend.

The three-week millionaire

Somewhere in B.C. is a man who was a millionaire for three weeks in 1978 because of a mistake by the provincial government.

He remains anonymous, except to about three civil servants and MLAs who have declined to name him.

The case surfaced in the public accounts committee of the legislature as it reviewed a matter exposed earlier this year by Auditor-General Erma Morrison, who criticized the procedures for keeping tabs on bearer bonds.

The bonds are as good as cash and can be converted almost anywhere.

The man received, unsolicited, 10 bearer certificates, each worth $100,000. They were Saskatchewan government bonds and had been sent to him rather than to Regina for registration.

Keith Littler, head of the finance ministry's securities section, told the committee that the $1 million in Saskatchewan government bonds, paid for by the B.C. government, were mailed to the man instead of to Regina for registration.

The man, a truck driver, kept the bonds in an office drawer for about three weeks before the ministry caught up with him.

Littler said a search started when the ministry did an internal audit just before Mrs. Morrison's team started its audit in February last year.

"Had this trucker been a little wiser in the ways of the world, could he have cashed these bonds for $1 million?" asked Economic Development Minister Don Phillips.

"Yes," said Littler.

Littler said the procedures on handling bearer bonds have since been tightened up.

Faster billing target - Wolfe

The B.C. government, which is 90 to 120 days behind in billing for $50 million in stumpage fees, is looking to interim billing in efforts to cut the delay, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said Wednesday.

Forestry officials said earlier this week the delay in billing by the B.C. Systems Corp., the government's computer division, is costing taxpayers $410,000 a month in lost interest.

Dave Stupich (NDP — Nanaimo) noted that the legislature's public accounts committee was informed Wednesday the amount of unbilled revenue, which totalled $26 million by March 31, 1978, was in excess of $80 million as of March, 1979.

Stupich said the committee was told the main factor "is that an important person in the B.C. Systems Corporation was taken away from forestry and put to mines."

He asked Wolfe what was more important in the mines department "than catching up with this $80 million of unbilled revenue."

Wolfe said he didn't know why the official was transferred to the mines ministry, but added the government is looking for ways to get the bills out sooner.

A week to forget . .

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

It's been a bad week for Premier Bill Bennett.

Ministers have been disagreeing with him in public and in private, one minister is even hauled onto the carpet for speaking to reporters about cabinet policies and the cabinet was split at least for the second time this session.

Monday the Bank of Canada raises the interest rate half a per cent. Reporters seek out cabinet ministers for comment.

Premier Bennett decries the move. There's no reason for it, he says. He disagrees with undue interest changes being forced on British Columbians and once again calls for B.C. representation on the board of the Bank of Canada.

Other reporters find Finance Minister Evan Wolfe.

Great news, he says. It will help stimulate investment in B.C. which will help the economy and employment. And if Canada doesn't keep pace with the U.S. (which also increased its national interest rate) the Canadian dollar could fall even further, perhaps as low as 70 or 75 cents.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm sees the press misinterpreting the effects of what will happen when the government ends discriminatory auto insurance rates.

Although he has nothing to do with the Insurance Corp. of B.C. he tries to straighten out the wrong impressions by giving the press further details of the new plan.

Apparently he says too much, and raises the ire of Bennett who doesn't like him stepping into another minister's areas of responsibility, or talking about policies known only to cabinet.

Then reporters begin digging into a strange new bill that sets up a powerful society to control business developments in the expanding resort community of Whistler.

Rumor has it that four cabinet ministers were appalled at the implications of the first draft of the bill and demanded it be completely rewritten.

The final draft now being debated in the house (see separate story on page one) still has left them unhappy, although they say they will now support it because it has the support of the majority of cabinet including the premier who is one of its strongest proponents.

Cabinet was earlier split over the use of nuclear power in the province with some ministers supporting its use arguing that its future use is inevitable.

Other ministers, including the premier, are on record saying nuclear power plants will never be used in the province.

The issue still bubbles to the surface from time to time especially since Bob Bonner, chairman of the board of directors of B.C. Hydro, is one of nuclear energy's most ardent supporters.

And Jim Hewitt, the energy minister who sits on the board of directors of Hydro with Bonner, has said in the past he's not opposed to nuclear energy.

As Bennett's grip on cabinet seems to weaken, one opposition MLA suggested the NDP not allow the session to wrap up in the next few days as expected, but keep it going for another month or so.

He wonders if things are falling apart in cabinet after less than two months, what would another full month of daily battle in the legislature do to the coalition.

Bus drivers reach accord

A tentative agreement was reached Wednesday between B.C. Hydro and the Amalgamated Transit Union, representing about 3,500 bus drivers and maintenance workers here and in Vancouver.

Union spokesman Al Ashton said details of the tentative pact are being withheld. He said a ratification vote would take place Aug. 10.

The union executive is recommending acceptance, Ashton said.

Murdoch posting

Victoria-born Rear-Admiral R.W. Murdoch (Rtd.) has been appointed chairman of the Canadian Military Colleges (CMC) Advisory Board by Defence Minister Allan McKinnon.

Appointed vice-chairman is Dr. R.W. Begg, a member of the board since 1976.

The board advises and makes recommendations to the minister for all matters pertaining to the Royal Roads Military College and Le College Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean.

Union's ranks full

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — The Union of British Columbia Municipalities now has full membership for the first time in its 76-year history with the admission of the village of Lion's Bay.

Mayor George Ferguson of Abbotsford said Monday the union is the only one in the country which represents each municipality in its province.

Phyllis Diller now 62, and still cracks 'em up

Scott's World
By Vernon Scott

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Phyllis Diller celebrated her 62nd birthday this week with four cakes on which she distributed 62 candles.

"One cake couldn't support all those candles," she cracked, somewhat winded after blowing out the small conflagration.

"It was either split up the candles or melt the cake. I keep telling myself I'm really only 35 because I take birthday control pills. And I want you to know 1980 holds no fear for me. When I was 19, I looked 80.

"My face lift eight or nine years ago changed my whole life. I look better now than the day I was born.

"Bob Hope says I was so ugly when I was brought into the world the doctor slapped my mother. Bob's a dear friend. He also told me I look like an azalea bush pruned by a Japanese gardener who was still sore about the war."

Phyllis, the U.S.'s premiere female stand-up comic, says the second half of her life has been a great improvement over her struggling early years.

She lives in a 22-room mansion in Brentwood on a manicured acre of sweeping lawns, towering trees and lush flower gardens. Her home is a showcase of antiques.

When she was 37 and breaking in as a comedienne, collection agencies were battering at her door, attempts were made to repossess her furniture. She was struggling to support her three children.

"Now the kids are all grown and married and I'm single," she sighed contentedly. "I even have two grandchildren.

"But I'm happy. A few years ago I worked almost every day of the year just for money to put the kids through college. I was so busy I had meters running all over the world. Today I work only six months a year and I'm better paid for it, too.

"The face lift didn't affect my career but it changed my private life. I feel better because when you look well it does your spirit good."

Phyllis, wearing an expensive white gown, served a delicious and dietetic lunch. She is a neat 5-foot-3, 107 pounds, a far cry from her lumpy beginnings. She recalled her early career days with humor.

"This is my 25th anniversary in show business," she said. "My first gig was at San Francisco's Purple Onion. I wasn't a stand-up comedienne because I was working with props — hat and glasses and canes — the sign of an amateur.

"I was good but my first show was a bomb. The only joints that would accept a female comic in those days were gay places. Non-gay male audiences were hostile. They still are.

"To this day I won't do my act unless there are women in the audience. Women are the first to laugh when I poke fun at high fashion, cooking, kids and driving. Then the men laugh, too.

Phyllis must have been doing something right. She stayed on at the Purple Onion 89 weeks, starting at $60 per week.

She has earned as much as $170,000 in a single week in Las Vegas. These days she appears with a dozen symphony orchestras a year.

Now you can enjoy the Sebastiani family tradition.

Our Sebastiani family vineyards are the oldest in Northern California. The first grapes were planted here in 1825. Today, the third generation of Sebastianis continues our family's heritage of quality and dedication to old world wine-making skills.

My father August (like his father before him) won't have it any other way. Aware of the importance of care and time, he insists we make our wines in the unhurried, traditional way. Sebastiani wines are softened and mellowed in redwood casks, then aged to the peak of maturity in the cool, even temperatures of our limestone cellars. We know that the degree of maturity and the method by which it is reached makes the difference between good wine and great wine: over the years, many of our wines have won gold and silver medals in national and international competitions.

Sebastiani Mountain Burgundy and Sebastiani Mountain Chablis are two wines my father is especially proud of. He calls them the "Sebastiani family's contribution to fine dining, in the style of the French country wines." People seem to agree because they're our two most popular wines.

May we share the Sebastiani family tradition of premium quality and excellent value with you? Look for Sebastiani Mountain Chablis and Sebastiani Mountain Burgundy. We introduce them with pride and confidence, and we think you'll enjoy them.

Series grind 'just a ball'

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Roxie Roker says she may be going against the grain, but she can hardly wait to start work on the sixth season of The Jeffersons.

Her enthusiasm also is boosted by the fact that the CBS series, a spinoff of All in the Family, is comfortably berthed in the top 10 of the Nielsen ratings.

"I see actors go on the talk shows and talk about how tired they are of their series and how they want to get out," said Ms. Roker, who goes back to work Aug. 1.

"I'm delighted to be coming back. Our group gets along so well I look forward to seeing them again. We have a ball — but we all wish we were making more money."

Ms. Roker plays Helen Willis, a black woman who is married to a white man, played by Franklin Cover. Their daughter is married to the son of George and Louise Jefferson, played by Sherman Hemsley and Isabel Sanford.

George Jefferson is a black counterpart of Archie Bunker and the show partly revolves around his dislike of the Willis's racially mixed marriage and of his daughter-in-law being half-white.

"I think what Franklin and I bring to the roles are humanness and naturalness," she said. "Once that statement has been made you have to react as a married couple. Many people think Franklin and I really are married.

"What Franklin and I have is an easy relationship. We took to each other and have a nice rapport. We don't have a stiffness. We have couple arguments about piddling things like bills. We don't get up in the morning and say, 'Aha, you're white, and I'm black'."

The challenge of such a role, she said, is retaining the racial identity that the black community expects.

She said, "Helen is sophisticated but has all these sides around her that I bring to her. The important thing is how you behave as a human being."

Ms. Roker said she is able to bring some of her own experiences to the role. In real life she is married to a white man and they have a 15-year-old son, Leonard.

She met her husband, Sy Kravitz, when she worked at NBC in New York. He was a news executive there. They commuted between Los Angeles and New York during the first two years of The Jeffersons, until he left NBC and moved here.

A stroll through history

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

Scenic walks abound in Victoria but too many people pass up one of the most interesting — a stroll through old town for a fond look at its historic buildings.

With a little effort as you move from street to street, you can absorb some of the area's architectural features which, incidentally, will pay off if you visit other cities in Canada and Europe.

You will know what to look for and compare, returning home with a better understanding of the cities and the people.

A book on the architectural features of buildings in downtown Victoria has been written by Martin Segger, director of the Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery at the University of Victoria, and illustrated by photographer Douglas Franklin of the Victoria Hallmark Society.

Segger has worked out four walking tours, the Old Town, James Bay, Victoria churches and Victoria residences. All worthwhile buildings along the routes and described, and their histories detailed.

Some of the architectural features and embellishments of buildings will surprise you. For example, Segger shows the decorative elements of the Chinese School is a random assemblage of "Classical, Italianate, Moorish, Gothic, and Oriental components."

He says the critical eye can isolate similar elements in the more characteristic architecture which "visually defines Chinatown and sets it apart from the mainstream of Victoria's commercial buildings."

Another interesting edifice is the Board of Trade building in Bastion Square. Have you ever noticed how the widows on each storey differ in style.

In one of the downtown walks, the route takes you past the Victoria Public Library, familiar to most Victorians. But how many have appreciated its architectural features. It is, as Segger points out, a magnificently proportioned building.

Another takes in the Royal Theatre which many people take for granted. But if the walker takes time to look, he can't but be impressed by its magnificent facade.

The inside too has impressivive decorations executed in plaster by two Parisian crafsmen, Henry Gotter and M.C.E. Dorisy, who were trained in the Ecole des Beaux-Arts. Unfortunately the extensive wall and ceiling murals were removed.

It's a book that should be in the library of every walker.

So the next time you plan a walk, pass up Dallas Road and Beacon Hill Park and stroll around the city.

Walk of the Week

Co-op housing aired tonight

George Connelly likes cooperative living.

He likes it so much he spearheaded the formation of a group, the Cameo Co-Operative Housing Development to make his dream come true.

For more than a year, Connelly has been working on the undertaking which, when completed will entail 63 housing units on 4.6 acres on Glentana Road in View Royal.

Connelly expects little difficulty raising the $2.8 million needed.

"There is a surplus of money available in Victoria," he says.

It's a good deal from the investor's standpoint because the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will be guaranteeing the entire loan.

Just over $700,000 will cover the cost of assembling the land. The balance will pay construction of the 63 one-to-four bedroom units.

Tenders are expected to be called sometime next month as soon as final working drawings are completed.

In the meantime, Connelly, who is chairman of the co-op's board of directors and manager, says a drive is on for members.

So far he has received 27 applications and a multitude of inquiries.

Considerable work remains to be done on vital decisions like the size of the units, kinds of materials to be used, and the features that should be incorporated into the housing complex. Much will depend on the income levels of those applying for membership .

Some of those decisions should be reached at the co-ops first general membership to be held at 7 p.m. tonight at the project site, 1501 Glentana.

Connelly expects a full house.

He says the response to the co-op to date has been encouraging and only confirms his opinion that co-ops may well prove the answer to future housing problems.

Fruit, meat: a unique blend

More than 5,000 years of successive invaders have resulted in a unique legacy of culinary habits in Pakistan. The pulao dishes made of fruit, meat and rice have become standards throughout the world.

BEEF CURRY

1½ pounds boneless beef round steak
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup each chopped onions and celery
1 tablespoon each flour and curry powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon each ground ginger and turmeric
¼ teaspoon each paprika and black pepper
¼ cup golden raisins
1½ cups boiling beef broth
¼ cup yogurt
3 cups hot cooked rice

Have meatman tenderize steak or pound meat thoroughly. Cut into 1-inch cubes. Brown in oil. Add onions and celery; continue cooking until vegetables are tender-crisp.

Blend flour and seasonings; sprinkle over meat and vegetables. Stir well. Add raisins and broth. Bring to a boil; reduce the heat, cover, and simmer one hour or until meat is tender. Just before serving stir in yogurt. Adjust seasonings, if necessary. Serve over beds of fluffy rice.

MARINATED KABOBS

1½ pounds lean, tender beef, turkey or lamb, cut in cubes
½ cup dry red wine
2 tbsp. lemon juice
¼ cup salad oil
1 small clove garlic, crushed
1 small onion, chopped
¼ tsp. salt (or to taste)
coarsely ground black pepper (to taste)

Prepare meat. In bowl, combine remaining ingredients (use a wire whisk; blend well). Place meat in marinade. Cover; refrigerate for 6 to 8 hours. To cook, drain meat (reserve marinade).

Thread meat on skewers. Boil over hot coals of barbecue or hibachi (so that food stays moist, yet browns well), basting with reserved marinade and turning several times to permit even cooking. Makes 4 servings.

Note — This recipe can also be cooked in oven. Broil according to type of meat used and size of kabobs.

Variation: Team up meat or poultry kabobs with appropriate vegetables. When cooking meat or poultry on the same skewer as vegetables, select quick-cooking foods that will require approximately the same cooking-time. Leave small spaces between food pieces so that heat can reach all surfaces.

Smell, taste show needs?

By DR. JEAN MAYER and
DR. JOHANNA DWYER

It is well known that certain smells and flavors greatly enhance our enjoyment of food. Ogden Nash and Kurt Weill summed this up in That's Him with their marvelous line: "You know the way you FEEL when you smell bread baking?"

Only recently, however, have these chemical senses of taste and smell been given serious medical study. So far, most of what we have learned has been from animal studies but, even so, the research has generated a number of theories on how taste and smell influence appetite and nutritional status.

Certainly it appears that taste and smell play the major role in helping animals choose foods. In addition, their taste mechanism is often related to their digestive, metabolic and nutritional needs. For example, animals deficient in the B vitamin thiamin, will instinctively develop a taste for foods that contain thiamin; these thiamin-rich foods make them feel better. In another study, animals deprived of salt were quickly able to choose the foods containing it. Usually, they'd eat enough in one feeding to make up for the lack of salt.

Other studies have found that conditions that alter metabolism may also trigger changes in food choices. For instance, parathyroid hormone is essential to the proper metabolism of calcium.

Animals whose parathyroid gland has been removed will increase their consumption of calcium-containing solutions. But when the parathyroid gland is replanted in these animals, they will decrease their calcium consumption.

In a similar fashion, animals that have been given progressively larger injections of insulin to lower their levels of blood sugar will automatically increase their consumtion of sugar water in an effort to compensate for the hypoglycemia (low blood sugar). But they will return abruptly to drinking plain water once the insulin is stopped.

Does the same thing happen in man? At this point, we don't know, although human beings do have some very definite taste preferences.

Sweets are high on the list of things we like. Dr. Samuel Fomon and his colleagues at the University of Iowa have found that even very young infants will react with delight when given a taste of sugar water. Moreover, many babies will eat more of a sweetened formula.

Many people have theorized that this taste preference was developed over millennia of trial and error, the lesson being that sweet foods were more likely to be safe and nutritious while bitter ones were potentially poisonous.

Unfortunately, this theory does not hold up to examination. There's also the myth that if children are given unlimited food choices, they will automatically select those that fulfill their nutritional needs. As any parent knows, there is no evidence to back this theory!

This does not mean, however, that our senses are unimportant to good nutrition. Both taste and smell are very important determinants in our selection of foods. And, of course, what we eat is a key factor in our over-all health.

A man who has a form preference for a high-fat diet (the typical American steak-hamburger-hotdog fare) all too often develops atherosclerosis and heart disease. Persons with a liking for highly salted foods and a tendency to high blood pressure may be more likely to develop hypertension.

Our senses of taste and smell also may be altered by certain diseases or nutritional deficiencies. One symptom of zinc deficiency, for example, is a diminished ability to taste and smell. Some studies have indicated that persons with hypertension may have an impaired sensitivity to taste salt, although this has been disputed by other studies.

Perhaps one of the best examples involves cancer. Many people who are under treatment for cancer complain that foods they have always enjoyed become tasteless or even disagreeable. Some find that normally sweet foods do not taste sweet unless extraordinary amounts of sugar are used.

Others complain that their taste for bitterness is more pronounced, while others find that their perception of sour tastes is very altered. Finding ways to alter these taste perceptions or to make foods taste good to the cancer patient is one of the real challenges of maintaining nutritional status in these people.

Youngsters very frequently complain that they do not like liver or certain vegetables that are highly nutritious. Trying to make these foods "taste good" is an important part of nutritional development.

In short, when left on their own, our natural senses of taste and smell do not always point us to the right foods. But our other senses — including common sense — can be employed to "educate" these chemical ones in good nutrition.

Choking cures taught

OTTAWA (CP) — About 200 owners, managers and employees of local hotels, restaurants and catering businesses have enrolled in a life-saving course that will teach them how to handle choking customers.

The course was organized by a restaurant supplier after an Ottawa client told him about his helplessness when a customer choked on a chicken bone.

The 2½-hour St. John's Ambulance first-aid course will also teach resuscitation methods and how to treat serious bleeding and burns.

Deep-fat critics in error

By PIERRE FRANEY

I sense a certain amount of fear and disdain among those who have not tried deep-fat frying at home. They think of it as dangerous — and so it is, if a cook is careless. They think of it as wasteful to use a quart or two of oil at once, but in fact the oil is easily preserved for later uses.

They think of it as greasy — which is palpably untrue since deep-fried food, cooked correctly, absorbs little oil and results not in some soggy mess but in food so crisp it's almost brittle.

A good start in overcoming the reluctance to employ this cooking method is the purchase of a decent fryer and basket.

Commonly, deep-fat fryers are electric, but I have never seen an electric one that did the job to my satisfaction. In these modern gadgets, which have proliferated only in the past few years, the oil too often fails to return to the proper temperature fast enough after food is placed in it.

What I prefer is the sort of design that has been around for a long time — a simple carbon steel pot and basket, with a rod on the lip of the pot to support the basket after it emerges from the oil. That basket hanger allows for easy draining of chicken or shrimp or potatoes.

Almost any oil with a neutral flavor works well in deep frying. The problems arise when the oil gets too hot. If the oil burns — burning is signalled by brown smoke — flavor is destroyed and the oil is ruined.

An important accessory is a deep-fat thermometer, which will tell you when the heat level of the oil verges on the 400-degree mark, a dangerous area. How far below it one stays depends on the food in the pot. Chicken, for instance, should cook more slowly than shrimp — 325 degrees for the former, 360 for the latter.

A couple of hints: To diminish splattering — as well as the chance of the oil catching fire — don't fill the pot much more than about halfway with oil, and be sure the ingredients are dry before they are placed in the pot. Also, don't use salt during the cooking process, since it causes oil to break down more quickly than it otherwise would.

To reuse the oil, strain it carefully through a piece of cloth and refrigerate it. Generally, four or five uses are possible before the oil must be discarded. If you are concerned about whether the hot oil has begun to degrade, dip a piece of white bread into it. Dark specks on the bread mean the oil has expired.

The carbon steel of the pot becomes well seasoned through use, and there would be little benefit in substituting stainless steel, which is more expensive. But the carbon steel does require some diligent care. Each time the pot is washed, wipe it carefully and then heat it on the stove for 30 seconds or so to remove any last drop of moisture.

A useful size pot is 5 inches deep and 10 12 inches in diameter. At the Professional Kitchen, 18 Cooper Square, which is one source with a plentiful supply, that pot costs $11.30, and the accompanying basket is $10.

Don't rush Junior into solids

Solid food is an important milestone for the little one. So don't be too hasty in spooning something into his mouth.

Until the age of about three months, an infant isn't physiologically ready for solid food. For example, it isn't until then that he can transfer food to the back of his mouth by tongue action.

In addition, solids are filling, so milk intake will likely decrease. This is undesirable, because the infant needs the nutrients and fluid in the combination that milk provides. A baby's digestive system isn't too mature when he starts out in this world, so that solids given too soon may cause potential food allergies to surface. Besides, the trend toward early introduction of solids may lead to obesity in infants.

Always remember that every child is an individual and the age to introduce solids will vary slightly. Flexibility is the name of game.

Three or four months is early enough to start with iron enriched infant cereal. Rice cereal is usually the first because it's least likely to cause an allergy (wheat or oats tend to be quite allergenic). Don't give him mixed cereals (made from wheat, oats and corn for example) until each cereal has been separately introduced.

At four or five months, he's ready for new flavors with pureed vegetables. Use fresh, frozen or dried vegetables and start with bland ones such as squash, sweet potatoes and green beans. But don't use home prepared beets, carrots or spinach before the child is six months old.

Then move to pureed fruit, either fresh, frozen or dried. Apricots, peaches, apples, pears and bananas are good choices. Avoid fruit with large amounts of fibre or seeds such as strawberries and raspberries. It's best to serve vegetables prior to fruit to reduce the chance of developing a sweet tooth. If he starts with that luscious pureed apricot, he won't think much of the green peas.

Pureed meats and meat alternates are next on the agenda, at six to eight months. Choose lean meat that's been stewed, braised, boiled or roasted — either pork, beef, veal, chicken, turkey, lamb or liver (serve ham on a limited basis). It's also time to offer dried beans, peas, lentils, cottage cheese and egg yolks. If the cottage cheese and egg yolk are too dry, just add a little milk until it reaches a good consistency. Introduce other types of mild cheese when the infant can handle the texture without modification.

It's better to hold off egg whites until his first birthday. Many children are initially allergic to them. Note that all of baby's food should be plainly prepared — no fried, seasoned, spiced or fatty food. The easiest foods to use are family foods but remove the infant's portion before adding butter, margarine, salt or sweetening, for example.

The first teeth develop at six to eight months. This is a good indication that the infant is ready for more solid food (dry bread, mashed family vegetables, etc.) You can introduce the chunkier, junior foods then.

By 12 months, give him chewy foods to encourage the development of hand-to-mouth co-ordination and proper chewing. A word of caution though: avoid giving him foods that can be broken into small chunks like carrot sticks. The important rule of thumb to remember when feeding the little one is that you control the quality of the food they eat . . . but they control the quantity.

Introduce baby foods one at a time, several days apart so that if the infant has an intolerance to the new food, it'll be easy to identify the culprit.

Use a very small amount of a new food (a teaspoon or less) at first, increasing gradually.

Offer new foods when he's feeling fit and happy. He'll probably refuse a new food if he's cranky, not because he doesn't like the taste, but because he's out of sorts.

ITHACA, N.Y. (UPI) — Waterbeds today are part waterbag and part conventional bed, says Regina Rector of Cornell University's extension service.

Mrs. Rector says almost every fault of the original has been corrected in the new designs.

She says the hybrids were carefully engineered to make the risk of leaks and water damage remote. Mrs. Rector says they weigh up to 50 per cent less than the old types, making them more usable.

Low-acid tomatoes risky

Occasional low acid tomatoes create a risk of botulism if they are processed in a boiling water bath.

Thanks to research, the number of varieties of tomatoes has greatly increased in recent years. But the acid content varies according to the variety and with the growing conditions across Canada.

Tomatoes become even less acidic later on in the season or if they're overripe, so there's a distinct possibility that Canadians are using tomatoes that are too low in acid for canning.

When there's a low acid level, an acid must be used in canning tomatoes, to yield the required acidity that's needed to prevent spoilage. Food Advisory Division investigated tomato acidification in 1974 and 1976. Citric acid was the first choice. It was found to be the most practical and effective because it lowered the acidity to the greatest degree. Citric acid is available from most drug stores.

If you find citric acid unavailable, the next best thing is bottled reconstituted lemon juice. Fresh lemon juice is not an acceptable substitute.

Choose tomatoes that are firm, well formed, ripe and unblemished. Don't use soft-ripe, bruised or spotted ones.

Dip the tomatoes in boiling water for 15 to 60 seconds, then in ice cold water. Remove the stem end and the skin. Fill the containers and cover with boiling tomato juice. Add the acid on top of the tomatoes — ¼ teaspoon citric acid or 1 tablespoon bottled reconstituted lemon juice per pint jar. Double the amount for quart jars. Leave a ½-inch headspace for glass jars, ¼ inch for cans.

If salt is preferred, add it with the acid. Use ½ teaspoon of salt to each pint jar and 1 teaspoon to each quart.

Tomatoes are usually processed in a boiling water bath. Allow 50 minutes for pints or 60 minutes for quarts.

If you're canning tomato juice, add the same amount of acid and process 40 minutes.

Citric acid is a naturally occurring acid in tomatoes. Neither it nor reconstituted bottled lemon juice will affect the flavor very much. But if you find the flavor a little tart, add a little sugar to taste (about 1 teaspoon per small container).

Cooked right, beaver's a tasty little critter

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Take one beaver, dressed and cleaned, drop it in a slow cooker with a little apple juice, cook until well done and, voila — a new variation of chuck roast.

They're tasty little critters, says Carl Mason of Sturgis, Miss., director of the Beaver Co-operative Association — especially spiced with the soaring price of beef.

"People are eating more beavers because they're good and they're free for the taking," he said. "People are interested in getting back to nature. And it's hard to beat free meat."

The association and the state wildlife department conducted a study that showed 17,000 beavers were taken in 1976 in Mississippi. Potentially, 100,000 beavers could be taken each year, each a splendid source of lean meat and protein, Mason said.

The aquatic animals are considered pests in Mississippi, where their population has increased tremendously in the last 10 years. Mason said the wildlife department study showed 70,000 acres are under water behind beaver dams, up more than 300 per cent from 1967, and the loss in flooded timber amounts to $12 million.

Mark Johnson, a wildlife and fisheries professor at Mississippi State University, said beaver is an ideal beef substitute for people who can catch the animals, which weigh from 30 to 50 pounds.

"We were going to do some work here to see what beaver hamburger tastes like," he said. "A beaver is a very disease-free, very clean animal. You don't have to worry about getting anything from it."

Beaver smacks of chuck roast, Johnson said, "unless a particular beaver seems to be feeding on a lot of pine, then it tastes like pine — it's horrible."

Microwaves: A fact of life

Microwave cooking has become a fact of life. If you're not into it yet, you may be soon. The Canadian Appliance Manufacturers' Association forecasts 225,000 microwave ovens in Canadian homes by 1983, as compared to the 95,000 units now in use.

Agriculture Canada's food consultants are constantly experimenting with the units. Cooking vegetables is an ongoing project. They found that corn, for example, can be cooked with or without the husks.

If you prefer to cook with the husks on, roll them back without removing the silk. Drizzle with some melted butter if desired. Then replace the husks and tie them. Place the ears 2 cm apart in a 700 watt microwave oven on HIGH. Allow 12 min for six ears, 10 min for two and five min for one. Turn them several times during cooking.

Corn without the husks needs to be cooked in a covered glass baking dish, with a small amount of water. Turn the ears and the baking dish ¼ turn four times during cooking. Add 25 mL of water to six ears and cook for seven min; 15 mL to two ears, for three min; and 10 mL to one ear, for 2½ min.

Vitamin A for stubborn acne

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

Difficult cases of acne are now being treated effectively with synthetic vitamin A. Patients with stubborn cases of acne which have not responded to usual forms of treatment have shown great progress with this regime.

Dr. Gary L. Peck at the National Cancer Institute in Bethasda, Md., recently reported a large series of cases in which the acne eruptions cleared up completely with the use of synthetic vitamin A.

Some side effects were noted by Dr. Peck but these were readily managed by manipulating the dosage.

The decision as to who should use vitamin A can be made only by a doctor who knows some of the disadvantages in terms of the side effects. For example, the vitamin A regime is never used during pregnancy.

Dr. Albert M. Kligman, of the University of Pennsylvanias, described the results as being "spectacular." He cautioned, however, that this approach "should be considered neither a cure nor an appropriate therapy for garden variety acne that is responsive to external medicines."

It is believed that th synthetic vitamin A (retinoic acid) is of tremendous significance and portends great hope for its future use.

This is the 50th anniversary of the original discovery of penicillin. When Dr. Alexander Fleming first published his original report in the British Journal of Experimental Pathology, his claims were just casually accepted. Eventually, this report was to be recognized as being of momentous significance.

Scientists with less insatiable curiosity than Dr. Fleming might have been dissuaded from pursuing the original study. The world would have been deprived of the single greatest contribution to the health of mankind.

Before long, the original idea of penicillin was converted from a laboratory curiosity to a major concept in medical treatment. The world owes a great debt of gratitude to Dr. Fleming and to the myriad scientists who surrounded him and who pursued with diligence his primary studies. Penicillin is a formidable accomplishment that must rank as one of the highest scientific achievements of mankind.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

'What a dumb, sexist answer'

DEAR ABBY: What a dumb, sexist answer you gave HATES SURPRISES, whose husband of 12 years still surprised her with one or more unexpected dinner guests. (He'd walk in and say, "Don't fuss, Honey. They'll eat whatever we eat." Meanwhile, poor wife was caught with only leftovers or barely enough to feed her own family.)

You said, "Stop being a GOOD scout and start being a GIRL Scout. Be prepared!"

Why should she be imposed upon with absolutely no notice? A thoughtful husband would never put his wife on the spot that way. And unless she's a total dummy or a doormat she wouldn't put up with it.

You should have told her to meet the inconsiderate boob at the door with, "I'm not prepared for company, so let's all eat out. It will take me only a few minutes to change my clothes."

DEAR NO: I got clobbered with my cutesy "Girl Scout" advice. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am steamed! Why should a wife have to feed extra guests without notice just because her husband decides to invite them at the last minute?

I can still remember my poor mother, scurrying around in the kitchen, frantically trying to get a company dinner together on a minute's notice because my father had picked up a couple of pals in the bar and brought them home for dinner.

You goofed, Abby. Instead of telling the wife to be prepared, you should have told her to tell her husband she wasn't running a fast-food restaurant, and to please take his friends somewhere else and feed them. — STEAMED.

DEAR STEAMED: All the feedback on feeding unannounced guest agreed with you — except this one:

DEAR ABBY: You told HATES SURPRISES to be prepered, but you didn't tell her how to be prepared for unexpected dinner guests.

You should have suggested that she keep a supply of cheese and crackers on hand, as well as a few cans of gourmet goodies just in case. Also, a bottle of wine would turn an ordinary meal into a festive occasion. And a couple of candles always helps to give a table an elegant appearance.

With so many new, prepared foods available at the market today, there's no excuse for anyone to be caught unprepared for drop-in guests.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow who has been criticized for signing my name "MRS. JOHN DOE." I was told that since there is no MR. John Doe, there cannot be a MRS. John Doe!

I am sure I read in your column that a widow could continue to use her deceased husband's name.

Friends insist that I am now Mrs. JANE Doe. Will you please come to my aid? — MRS. JOHN DOE.

DEAR MRS. JOHN DOE: Even though John Doe is no longer living, he gave you his name to use as long as you live. So until (or unless) you remarry, you are Mrs. JOHN Doe.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "FIFTH GRADER": If I could give a youngster just one piece of advice, it would be read, read, read!

Crombie vow on Alert Bay

Federal Health Minister David Crombie said Wednesday the federal government will help upgrade health services in Alert Bay.

About 25 members of the Nimpkish Indian band were picketing in front of the legislature when Crombie met with provincial Health Minister Bob McClelland.

They want the provincial government to hold an inquiry into the death of a young Indian girl in Alert Bay earlier this year, and into the conduct of Dr. Jack Pickup who was found negligent in the death by a coroner's jury.

"We've committed to the band a continuance of the level of health care that has been provided during the time they have had an inquiry — the doctor and emergency transportation," Crombie said.

Crombie, who will meet with the Indians in three to five weeks, said he would not get involved in the dispute over holding an inquiry because it is a provincial responsibility.

Band spokesman Bill Cranmer said his people want Pickup suspended immediately and another doctor placed in St. George's Hospital.

"We would also like a public inquiry so people could realize what a mess things are like in Alert Bay."

Spraying caution urged

Chemical sprays for garden pests are too risky to be used without extreme care, says the Victoria parks department.

In a notice to householders and gardeners a 12-point guide is recommended, taken from the current edition of Pest Control for the Home and Garden, published by the agriculture department.

Advice ranges from careful reading of pesticide container labels, to care in handling and cleaning up after use.

Never use more than the instructions require, never spray around animal feed or water, avoid spillage on skin or clothing and never smoke while applying dust or sprays, the circular warns.

Billion-dollar tag put on line

A proposed B.C. Hydro transmission line to Vancouver Island, estimated to cost $640 million, will in fact cost at least one billion dollars, environmentalists predict.

But Environment Minister Rafe Mair, while saying he had heard the $1 billion figure quoted, said he had no way of confirming or denying it.

Bill Otway, head of the B.C. Federation of Wildlife, said experts in the transmission-line-building field had come up with a firm $1 billion price tag for the Cheekeye-Dunsmuir line, which has aroused considerable opposition from land owners affected by the line's route across the Sechelt Peninsula.

Meanwhile, in the legislature Wednesday night, Mair confirmed that a report which strongly questions the need for the line does exist and that the taxpayers paid $8,000 for it.

But he said he had not seen it and had been informed of its existence by Dennis O'Gorman, head of the cabinet Environment and Land-Use Committee's secretariat.

Replying to persistent questioning by Don Lockstead (NDP — Mackenzie), Mair explained the report was commissioned by the secretariat, which operates independently as well as on instruction from the cabinet committee.

Outside the house, Mair said the report, prepared by economist Dr. Marvin Shaffer, was only one of many components which went into a report prepared by O'Gorman for the cabinet.

"My reliance is upon Mr. O'Gorman and the secretariat," Mair said. "They're the ones that are advising me. I might just as well go and ask them for a copy of the letter the lawyer sent, the accountant sent, the economist sent and everybody else sent in order to make up their report to me."

Mair said the controversy surrounding the report is arousing his curiousity and "is going to get me to go and take a look at the report just to so that I can say that I've seen it."

He said he is being stubborn because he fears it would "establish a very dangerous precedent."

"If Mr. O'Gorman, in future, cannot make a report to ELUC without being in the position of exposing letters from economists, laywers or accountants or whatever it may be on each occasion, I think that that is wrong."

He said he is sure the New Democratic Party, if it was in government, would say exactly the same thing.

2-to-1 margin in IWA acceptance

Members of the coastal region of the International Woodworkers of America have voted 66.1 per cent to accept what regional president Jack Munro calls a "hell of a good settlement."

The agreement with the forest industry will be signed today.

"We were pleased to see the two-to-one margin and that fact that the contract was accepted by all eight locals," said Munro.

The lowest total was 57 per cent from Alberni where some IWA members had walked out on their own.

Voting in the 8,000-member southern interior region cannot be completed before Aug. 4 because several mills are closed for summer holidays, but a similiar or slightly higher acceptance is expected.

Preliminary talks have started between the industry and the 8,000-member northern region of the IWA.

Their contract expires Aug. 31. The expiry date is likely to be the most critical issue in those talks.

The IWA wants to change the date to coincide with other agreements in the industry.

The IWA's acceptance followed the softening Tuesday of the stand by the rebel 6,000-member Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers Union — the only one of three forest unions to reject the contract.

Union president Angus Macphee has now said the union will accept the contract provided outstanding issues at four or five of their nine locals are cleared up.

The PPWC could find itself even more isolated in the next round of negotiations two years from now.

Talks are continuing between the IWA and the Canadian Paperworkers Union with the aim of merging.

A spokesman for the IWA says the talks, under the auspices of the Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott, have been "very satisfactory".

The CPU signed the contract with the forest companies last week, ending fears of a strike in B.C.'s newsprint mills.

The contract, basically the same for all three unions, includes a wage and benefits package worth about $3.05 an hour per employee. Industry has said the deal will cost close to $300 million a year.

Asbestos Corp. to battle on

MONTREAL (CP) — Asbestos Corp. lost a legal battle Wednesday in its fight to block a takeover of its Quebec mining assets by the province, but it hasn't lost the war.

Mr. Justice Denis Levesque of Quebec Superior Court dismissed the company's request for an injunction to forestall expropriation, but hinted that the U.S.-controlled company could win another injunction once the government serves an expropriation notice.

Asbestos Corp. lawyers also filed an appeal of Wednesday's verdict.

The government, by virtue of a law passed in June, can expropriate the asbestos producer at any time, but appears in no hurry to do so.

In Quebec City, Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau reiterated a government pledge, first made during the two-week court hearing, that a hasty takeover is out of the question.

Parizeau said the government would study comments by Mr. Justice Levesque to the effect that some company arguments — notably those about possible disruption of its overseas operations — have merit.

The financial world reacted immediately, as the Canadian dollar plunged to 85.54 cents U.S. on Wednesday afternoon from 85.74 the previous day. By mid-morning today, however, the dollar had inched back up to 85.62 on New York money markets.

Trading in Asbestos Corp. shares, suspended Wednesday on the Montreal and Toronto stock exchanges pending the court ruling, resumed today but activity was slight.

In Montreal, there had been no trading by mid-morning. The shares were quoted at $43 asked and $40 offered. In Toronto, the stock opened at $42 and was trading at $42⅝ by mid-morning on a volume of 2,600 shares. Analysts said no major blocs changed hands.

The company was seeking an injunction barring a takeover until the courts can rule on the constitutionality of the expropriation legislation. Asbestos Corp., Quebec's second-largest asbestos producer behind Johns Manville, contends the bill is unconstitutional because it was adopted in French only.

Dollar discrimination taxing for single dad

OTTAWA (CP) — Michael McCaffrey has laid a complaint of sex discrimination against the revenue department, charging that single fathers don't have the same rights as single mothers when it comes to claiming child-care expenses under the Income Tax Act.

But the department of justice has applied for a court order to stop the Human Rights Commission from hearing the case and McCaffrey may not have a chance to air his grievance.

McCaffrey filed a complaint with the commission in March after the revenue department disallowed a 1977 tax deduction claim for child-care expenses because he didn't have written proof that he is separated from his wife.

"A woman doesn't have to produce a separation agreement . . . and that discriminates against single fathers," he said in an interview.

The commission had scheduled the hearing for June 21 in Toronto, but postponed it to Aug. 2 after the government applied for the court order.

At issue is a section of the Income Tax Act which says a man may deduct child-care expenses only if he is separated from his wife "pursuant to a decree, order or judgment of a competent tribunal or pursuant to a written agreement."

"I drew up a separation agreement myself rather than pay someone to do it and I sent her two copies, but she never returned them," McCaffrey said.

Atkey's thanks bubbling over

By JIM ROBB
FP News Service

OTTAWA — When the first armed forces aircraft headed out from its Trenton, Ont. base Wednesday to pick up Indochonese refugees in the Far East, 24 cases of Canadian beer were carefully stowed on board.

It's a personal token of thanks from Immigration Minister Ron Atkey to immigration officers on the spot who have been working overtime to process refugee families for the trip to Canada.

Toronto reporters covering the refugee crisis in the Far East were so impressed with the work being done by the harassed immigration officers they asked one of them, Scott Mullin, 22, a graduate of Carleton University here what they could do for the nine Canadians.

More than 6,700 members of the Communications Workers of Canada were locked out in Ontario by Bell Canada in an attempt to stop 24-hour rotating strikes, which a company spokesman called devastating.

A spokesman for the union said 3,500 were locked out in the Toronto area for the third day of a three-day lockout. Toronto workers are expected back on the job Friday.

About 1,410 Bell workers were locked out for the second day in Oshawa, Belleville, Kingston, Pembroke, Renfrew, Niagara, Kitchener, Waterloo, Brantford and Guelph.

And 1,810 workers were locked out for the first day in Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Sarnia, Chatham and St. Thomas.

The strikes, which the union says will likely lead to more lockouts, today included 750 workers in Peterborough, Lindsay, Haliburton, Smiths Falls, Cornwall, Barrie, Newmarket, Orillia, Midland, Owen Sound and Walkerton.

The telephone company employs 15,000 installers, technicians and repairmen in Quebec and Ontario.

"We are still holding our own," Mel James said. "We are still roughly three weeks behind in the installation of new phones and three to four days behind in repairs."

"What we are more concerned about is the increase in vandalism in the last 10 days," James said.

"Cables have been cut and a brick thrown through a truck window. The union denies that its members are responsible but I feel these incidents are typical of the the foolish things done by any group in a dispute."

Travelling with little tots can sometimes be a trying experience. Here is a tip that works wonders keeping the children contented. For each child make up a bag of surprises. Wrap each surprise. Allow the child to pick one item to open at intervals. The number of packages and intervals for opening same will depend on the length of the trip. The packages could consist of puzzles, books, packages of fruit or nuts, anything you think will please your little ones.

Cauliflower Salad with Chives and Capers. 1 head cauliflower; 6 pimiento stuffed olives; 4 pitted ripe olives; 3 tbsp. olive or vegetable oil; 2 tbsp. wine vinegar; 1 tbsp. capers; 1 tbsp. chopped parsley; 1 tsp. SIFTO® Salt; freshly ground black pepper; curly lettuce leaves. Wash cauliflower and cut into flowerets. Cook in 1 inch of boiling salted water 6-7 minutes or until just tender. Drain well. Place in a shallow dish. Cut olives lengthwise into fine strips and add to caulifloweretts. In small bowl mix remaining ingredients except lettuce. Spoon over caulifloweretts; cover and refrigerate several hours, basting occasionally with marinade. To serve, line a salad bowl with lettuce leaves. Fill with cauliflower. Spoon olives and dressing over flowerets. 4 Servings. SIFTO® Salt where all good food begins.

Spring and Summer bring changes in our daily routines—from weekend outings to different foods to—stomach upsets. For many years, wild strawberry extracts have been a trusted standby for the resulting miseries of intestinal cramps and diarrhea. But why did they have to taste so terrible? The folks at Dodds have formulated a new milder tasting wild strawberry extract. It still tastes like medicine but you no longer have to wonder whether the cure is worse than the complaint. Soothing, non-constipating Dodds Wild Strawberry Extract works effectively for your children too. Be prepared for the Summer...Get some now and have help on hand always.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
4 ♡	4 NT	Dble	Pass
Pass	Redble	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead — two of hearts.

You wouldn't think that this could happen to two of America's top players, but it did. There is a bidding convention which, when the proper occasion arises, works out well. Let's suppose your opponent opens the bidding with four of any suit and you have the values to compete against him but don't know which suit to bid.

If you double, there is a good chance your partner will pass, because high-level doubles are usually treated as penalty doubles. Sometimes your distribution is such that you don't want the double left in but would rather have your partner respond in a suit. When this situation arises, you bid four notrump. This directs your partner to bid his best suit.

Of course, you should also have very substantial high-card values to make this bid, since you are forcing partner to respond in the five level. Four notrump usually shows a void in the opponent's suit.

Once upon a time, many years ago, Harry Fishbein was playing in a high-stake rubber bridge game and held the South hand. His four notrump bid was well under par; he should have had at least 3 or 4 more high-card points for his bid.

His illustrious partner had never heard of the convention and neglected to bid five spades over West's double of four notrump. Fishbein's redouble was intended to emphasize that he still wanted North to choose a suit. But again North failed to bid five spades (which was laydown). So Fishbein played the hand at four notrump redoubled. He lost seven heart tricks and three clubs to go down seven — 4,000 points!

The next day, North was telling a friend of his about the giant catastrophe. "Imagine that Fishbein. I didn't even open my mouth and went down 4,000!"

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for For Friday, July 27, By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Hard facts concerning service, dependents, employment could come to light. You overcome obstacles by defining terms, seeing people and places as they are, not merely as you wish them to be. Insist on verification of reports.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Accent on involvement, intensified relationship, creative capabilities, children, change, commitment, added responsibility. Imprint style. Get off sidelines and into full participation. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Finish what you start — complete building plans, check insurance, leases, structure. Home, long-range plans, harmonizing family relationships — these are part of agenda. Aries, Libra and the number 9 figure in scenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Emphasis on new starts, ideas, fresh concepts, getting to heart of matters. Leo member of opposite sex could "play games." Accent versatility, humor, willingness to make concessions sans giving up principles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accent on payments, collections, ability to evaluate possessions. Hunch pays off — individual who aided and taught you in past is again on scene. Know it and do something about it. Aquarius, Cancer natives figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Follow through, diversify, make inquiries, give full rein to intellectual curiosity. Elements of timing and luck ride with you. be direct, confident, welcome new challenges, contacts. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure prominently.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): What appears a "prison" represents only temporary "confinement." Check details, read between the lines, find reasons for recent events. Much that occurs could be shrouded in mystery. Scorpio person aids in locating what you need.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Be ready for change, travel, variety. Accent on romance, wishes, desires, ability to get credit due with out alienating the less talented. Message should become crystal-clear. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives are in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Emphasis on standing in community, basic life style and domestic adjustments, determining goals and how to reach them. Be diplomatic, make intelligent concessions to family member. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good Moon aspect coincides now with imprinting of style, children, affair of heart. Means excitement replaces routine. You'll come alive. Pisces, Virgo persons and the number 7 — figure prominently. Take a chance — after you define terms.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Facts concerning leases, financial arrangements involving one close to you will come to light. Persist, dig deep, follow through on hints, subtle nuances. Older individual is in your corner and proves it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Finish what you start. You can strike chord of universal appeal. Accent on rights, permissions, reaching working arrangement with one whose views do not coincide with your own. Aries, Libra persons figure in scenario.

IF JULY 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you fuse people to you with their problems. You are capable of drama, of illustrating beliefs in graphic fashion. You inspire confidence, you are attractive, dynamic and will fight when the cause is right. Aries, Libra persons play key roles in your life. November could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring a major domestic adjustment. You make important "discovery" in August. Love could be very much in picture. You find creative outlets. You are on the way to greater happiness and additional chances for success.

FUN WITH FIGURES

Although a bit garbled the old saying is surely true here, for the problem becomes quite easy if you see how to approach it. What does it all add up to?

GARDENING

Jack Beastall

Could the garden be more relaxing?

A garden is supposed to be a retreat where one can relax in peace at this time of year and enjoy the fruits of past labor, but I sometimes wonder if any real gardener with a real garden and no outside help ever manages to sit and enjoy the surroundings for more than a few minutes at a time.

It seems to me we no sooner get seated than we spot something that should have been done, or must be done immediately, and we are back on our feet and continuing our work.

Although finding time to sit down and contemplate the garden as a whole is not the easiest thing, it is far more difficult to look at our own garden in a truly detached manner and enumerate its faults and weak points.

Everything we have done in the past has been done for some reason, and whether or not we reached the original goal we hesitate to scrap any of the work no matter how much we recognize the amount of extra labor it entails at the present time.

After years of analyzing garden problems I think it is safe to say that in most instances the main cause of our difficulties in maintenance is the one feature of the garden we would never think of eliminating.

Because we wish to retain that one feature the rest of the garden cannot be changed to any great degree nor can the work be lessened.

For those of us in the higher age brackets this reduction of maintenance becomes more important each year, and it seems to me that July is a good time to make a critical study of the work involved and to determine the most time-consuming operations and whether they are worth the time and labor now demanded.

Maybe the same, or comparable effects could be achieved with a little re-arranging and some elimination, to give an over-all effect requiring less attention.

Straight lawn cutting is not nearly so time-consuming as trimming the edges of a lawn, therefore the lawn needs to be large in area compared with the length of the edges. If edges can be completely eliminated by discarding centre beds and borders around the perimeter, the care and upkeep would be greatly lessened.

A large bed of flowering shrubs and broad-leafed evergreens requires less attention than small beds of annuals which have to be planted each spring and discarded each fall, or perennials which need dividing and replanting every third year.

Maybe the garden lacks shade in summer. Shade can be provided by trees or a garden structure. If it is to be trees, visit the local tree nurseries now while the plants are at their best, select those most suitable to the rest of the garden and plant this coming fall. Remember, it takes several years of growth before a tree can give much in the way of shade.

Whether you need a major change or just some minor changes, now is the time to pick holes in your garden, not literally with a pick, but mentally with a notebook and pencil, and September to November is the time to make your garden into a place where you can relax in peace, knowing it is now designed to look after itself.

PLANNING AREA NO. 2
Capital Regional District
ELECTORAL AREA OF VIEW ROYAL ZONING
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

NOTICE is hereby given that all persons who deem their interest in property affected by the following proposed by-law will be afforded an opportunity to be heard on the matters contained therein at a Public Hearing to be held in the View Royal Community Hall, 279 Old Island Highway, Victoria, B.C. on Tuesday, July 31, 1979 at 7:30 p.m.

1. Proposed Zoning By-law No. 599 for View Royal is a By-law to regulate the use of land, buildings and structures and regulate the height and siting of buildings and structures in View Royal. The regulatory provisions of this By-law have been drawn up to conform as closely as possible with the policies contained in the Official Community Plan (View Royal) adopted by By-law No. 243 of the Capital Regional District in 1976 and as further amended.

The proposed Zoning By-law established both provisions of general applicability and provisions and regulations for each of the zones established by the By-law and are summarized as follows:

Section 1 PURPOSE: The View Royal Zoning By-law regulates the development and use of land and the location, and use of buildings and structures erected thereon

Section 2 DEFINITIONS: Defining such items as campsite, corner lot, gross floor area, structure, watercourse

Section 3 ADMINISTRATION AND ENFORCEMENT: Which includes such items as nonconforming uses enforcement, amendment procedure

Section 4 ESTABLISHMENT OF ZONES: Defining the area of the proposed by-law, repeal of previous zoning regulations

Section 5 GENERAL PROVISIONS: Includes regulations for such items as A.L.R., flood control, accessory building, home occupation, prohibited uses, temporary buildings

Section 6 OFF-STREET PARKING: The owners of any building in any zone shall provide off-street vehicular parking

Section 7 OFF-STREET LOADING: The owners or occupiers shall provide off-street loading spaces

Section 8 RURAL ZONE A-1: Allows for uses such as agriculture fair grounds, agriculture, one-family dwelling, kennel

Section 9 ONE-FAMILY DWELLING ZONE R-1: Allows for such uses as one-family dwelling, home occupation

Section 10 TWO-FAMILY DWELLING ZONE R-2: Allows for such uses as one-family dwelling, two-family dwelling, home occupation

Section 11 ATTACHED HOUSING ZONE RM-1: Allows for such uses as one-family dwellings and two-family dwellings, attached housing, home occupation.

Section 12 APARTMENT ZONE RM-2: Allows for such uses as apartment, one and two family dwellings, attached housing, home occupation

Section 13 NEIGHBOURHOOD COMMERCIAL ZONE C-1: Allows for such uses as bank, business and professional offices, restaurant, personal service establishments

Section 14 HIGHWAY COMMERCIAL ZONE C-2: Allows for such uses as gasoline service station and car wash, parking facilities, taxi office, veterinary clinic, accessory buildings and uses

Section 15 TOURIST COMMERCIAL ZONE C-3: Allows for such uses as campsite, motel or auto court, hotel, restaurant, cafe, which are accessory to permitted uses

Section 16 LIGHT INDUSTRIAL ZONE M-1: Allows for such uses as automobile body shop, storage yard, warehousing, wholesaling

Section 17 GENERAL INDUSTRIAL ZONE M-2: Allows for such uses as gravel processing, industrial uses, except that defined as "offensive trade"; noxious or offensive to the public by reason of odour, dust, smoke, gas, noise, vibration, glare or electrical disturbance, refuse and garbage dumps, auto wrecking yards

Section 18 COMMUNITY INSTITUTIONAL ZONE P-1: Allows for such uses as church, community care facility, hospital, rest home, school

Section 19 PARK AND PUBLIC USE ZONE P-2: Allows for such uses as golf course, playfields, recreation facilities

Section 20 DEVELOPMENT PERMITS: Allows for the Regional Board to issue development permits which may regulate or require such items as landscaping, dimensions and siting of buildings, exterior finishing of buildings, areas for play and recreation.

Copies of the complete proposed by-law may be viewed during normal working hours, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Monday to Friday inclusive (holidays excepted), at the offices of the Capital Regional District, 524 Yates Street, OR the Building Inspection Offices, 670 Granderson Avenue, Victoria, B.C.

Rock ban bid meets deaf ears

Langford director Ed Lubick said he could not go along with a proposed bylaw that would ban outdoor public shows or performances featuring the playing of amplified music.

He said he had requested reports from police and staff on the possible traffic hazards or other problems such events could bring after a small concert was held in the Western Community some weeks ago.

"They are not happening often and I think we should research this a little further before proceeding," he said.

The bylaw has been tabled until reports are available.

Langford centre nod

A $10 million shopping centre in Langford on Jacklin Road got its first nod from the Capital Regional District's local planning and zoning committee on Wednesday.

The committee voted to have a bylaw prepared rezoning the 30-acre site from limited agriculture and industrial to general commercial.

Terry Ridley of Ridley Brothers Development Company Ltd. said the centre will cover 185,000 square feet, of which 70,000 square feet would be occupied by a major department store, 40,000 by a food supermarket and 75,000 by other retailers.

He said the shopping centre would provide 275 jobs with an annual payroll of $3 million with sales amounting to about $30 million.

Ridley told directors the shopping centre has been in the planning stage since 1977.

He assured them that there would be no problem from the run-off of surface water because it would be diverted to a one-acre landscaped artificial lake on the site.

Sewage, he said, would also be dealt with on the site. There would be a secondary treatment plant, similar to that used at Brentwood College and the Juan de Fuca Hospital, and a large disposal field.

He agreed that open-space walkways would be provided throughout the site and said the shopping centre will only be one-storey high and above the 200-year flood plain level.

Ridley said he hoped to start construction in early 1980.

Fatt gets CRD backing on acreage zoning bid

Richard Fatt, owner of Fatt's Poultry Farm Ltd. in Saanich, received the support of the Capital Regional District Wednesday in his bid to have his 7.1-acre farm included in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR).

Fatt asked for the inclusion in the face of encroaching housing after Saanich council had refused to buy a buffer zone around his property which has been in his family since 1927.

An earlier bid to have the farm put into the ALR had been rejected by the ALR commission.

The regional district also supported an application by Norman Ross and Associates Ltd for the estate of J. S. Judge for 65.2 acres, bounded by West Burnside and Prospect Lake Roads, to be removed from the ALR.

The property, part of a long time farm, will be divided into four five-acre lots, one 17.8-acre lot and another 23.2-are lot.

Planning staff had opposed the application and earlier Saanich council had passed it on without recommendation.

Directors voted in favor of the application after hearing that Saanich was not opposing the subdivision. The planning department had been seeking 10-acre lot sizes in the rural parts of the municipality.

Public hearings at end

In spite of 21 pages of proposed changes to the Western Community Settlement Plan by provincial ministries, the Capital Regional District's electoral area services committee was told Wednesday that no more public hearings will be required.

Jim Masterton, acting director for community planning, told the committee the proposed changes made no over-all major amendments to the plan.

He said response from the various ministries included comments showing the province doubted the plan could be implemented because the projected population base depended on the installation of sewers.

The committee endorsed Masterton's recommendation that amendments based on the provincial recommendations be referred to the municipal affairs ministry for comment before any official amendments are made.

The committee also approved terms of reference for the first part of a study on the cost of growth in the Western Community, to be made by DPA Consulting Ltd. of Vancouver at a cost of less than $5,000.

Flyer cries bias in moorage row

He said Wednesday Victoria City Rowing Club has been given foreshore rights denied to him and other aircraft owners who use public access to moorage floats on the west shore of the lake.

The regional district, as caretaker of the park, has jurisdiction only to high water mark, Gillespie said.

Meanwhile, he said the district unjustly gave the rowing club a lease without holding a public hearing and without the approval of the minister of lands.

The flyer said a legal opinion has been put forward confirming the lakebed is Crown land and not under CRD jurisdiction.

Louise Davidson of Prestwick, Scotland, received severe head injuries in the mishap and has remained unconscious since.

Trail issue discussed

Developers can be required to dedicate trails as well as roads when land is subdivided, Capital Regional District directors were told Wednesday.

D. I. South, senior approving officer in the ministry of transportation, communications and highways, told directors in a report the problem in requiring trails is that they must be surveyed and maintained and a good reason for them given.

Carter pitches directly to public on oil tax

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — President Jimmy Carter appealed directly to Americans Wednesday night to "speak" to their congressmen to make sure that the oil lobby does not gut his windfall profits tax when it comes up in the Senate.

Without the tax, he said at his news conference, "we cannot reach our energy goals."

"Those of you who believe in the future of our country, those of you who believe that our energy program must be passed, please speak to the Congress of the United States and especially the U.S. Senate which still has the responsibility to act," he urged.

The Senate Finance Committee, headed by Sen. Russell Long will be considering the tax shortly. It is generally expected that the Senate will produce a weaker tax.

Addressing this belief, Carter said, "There's a threat now that the oil lobby will focus its attention on the Senate. I think it is almost a sure thing."

If the lobby succeeds, Carter said, the administration will be unable to reach its goals of reducing the "dangerous dependence on foreign oil" by the U.S.

Carter decided to take his case directly to the public one day after congressional leaders told him that passage of major portions of his energy package would be delayed until after the lawmakers' month-long summer recess.

As he had in his speech following the Camp David domestic summit, Carter abandoned his usual low-key, informal style and used the press conference forum to address the American public directly, beginning with a formal introduction: "My fellow citizens and members of the press...."

Carter said that since addressing the nation on television 10 days ago expressing his concern about a crisis of confidence in American institutions, he had acted to strengthen his administration.

"I have moved swiftly to create a better administration team — unified and in good fighting shape to meet the challenges ahead," he said.

In his opening comments, Carter said that millions of Americans had responded positively to what he said on television 10 days ago "because they know I was telling the truth."

Carter said he had proposed to

As for his extraordinary shakeup in government, the President said: "I have no apology to make for it."

"I had a choice of either dragging it out week after week with speculation and doubt and confusion or getting it over in effect in 48 hours," he said.

As for next year's federal budget and the outlook on taxes, Carter said a Republican proposal for a tax cut was impractical at this point. "You can't get something for nothing," he said. "There is no free lunch."

In response to a question about speculation over his health — speculation that was voiced in public by some Republicans during Carter's long stay at Camp David, the President said: "I feel perfectly healthy."

Meanwhile, Senator Edward Kennedy has announced his energy program, a 10-year $58-billion effort "to reduce our oil imports significantly in the near future."

"I'm generally in support of the president's program," the Massachusetts Democrat said Wednesday at a news conference.

He acknowledged, however, that he has "expressed opposition" to Carter's plan to remove price controls on domestic oil. Moreover, he didn't sound enthusiastic about Carter's call for an all-out synthetic-fuels program and even less so about the White House plan to establish an energy mobilization board.

Kennedy said he believed the energy program he and Senator John Durkin (Dem. N.H.) were offering at their joint news conference could be melded with Carter's proposals in the Senate energy committee, on which Durkin serves.

In other reaction to the presidential speech, the U.S. oil industry says Carter's "windfall profits tax" isn't needed, despite his statement that the levy is crucial to his new multi-billion-dollar energy program.

"We continue to believe that added new taxes in addition to those already on the books are unnecessary," Charles DiBona, president of the American Petroleum Institute.

He said that under current law, government gets 60 per cent of any real increase in revenues resulting from decontrol of oil prices.

Big profits but buyers to suffer

LONDON (CP) — British Gas Corp. is embroiled in a classic example of an embarrassment of riches.

The government-owned monopoly must convince its captive customers that despite a pre-tax profit of almost $1 billion last year, natural gas heating and cooking bills must go up, possibly by as much as one third.

British Gas froze domestic prices, paid off all its government debt, and still came out with a profit of £360 million, before taxes last year. That was twice the profit of 1977 and 10 times the profit of the year before that.

However, the Price Commission, in a recent report, took the unusual step of advocating that the corporation should look more in the long-term interest of the customer.

There are warning signs in the commission's report. Demand is increasing faster than forseeable supply — so much so that the corporation is turning away customers.

Critics say that it makes little sense to have the price of domestic gas cheaper, in real terms, than it was in 1976.

The cost of other kinds of energy has gone up and economist say a pricing policy which protects consumers from the general trend of energy price increases is not in the long-term interest of those consumers.

Cheap natural gas means that families with gas central heating have less incentive to insulate their homes or turn down the thermostat.

The Price Commission recommends that the cost be based on the cost of imported Norwegian gas, which leaves customers asking what happened to the rosy promises of cheap fuel from the North Sea oil and gas fields.

It also raises the question of what happens to the profits, an incredible $1 billion last year, and by how much when the price goes up?

British Gas says is earmarking much of the profit to a fund from which the British government may borrow.

DUBLIN (UPI) — Roman Catholic officials refuse to rule out the possibility Pope John Paul II will visit strife-torn Northern Ireland next month, despite strong opposition from militant Protestants.

Cardinal Tomas O Fiaich, primate of all Ireland, asked if he would be receiving the pope in his primatial see in Armagh, in Northern Ireland, would only say, "I don't know."

But, he added such a visit was "not ruled out."

Iran kills 8 more

TEHRAN (AP) — Seven more men and a woman were executed by firing squads today, the state radio said, raising to 372 the number shot since Ayatollah Khomeini came to power in February.

The woman and two of the men were executed in Khorramshahr. She was convicted of encouraging prostitution and the men were convicted of rebelling against the revolutionary government.

One of the men also was found guilty of being an accomplice in an explosion that damaged oil pipelines two weeks ago.

New York gays protest filming

NEW YORK (AP) — About 200 homosexuals demonstrated in Manhattan on Wednesday night, protesting the shooting a film about a homosexual psychopath.

The demonstrators marched along 14th Street from Seventh Avenue to Ninth Avenue, where the Cruising producer, Jerry Weintraub, was filming earlier in the day.

Police said one man, whose name was withheld, was arrested after he slashed the tires of a patrol car and tried to attack an officer with a razor blade. He was charged with felonious assault and criminal mischief.

The demonstrators, shouting and blowing whistles, unsuccessfully tried to take over the shooting site, a former bar called Catacombs. Instead, they overturned some police barricades and threw beer cans, police said.

The movie focuses on an undercover police officer, played by Pacino, who is supposed to stop killings of homosexuals in New York City. The detective goes on a psychopathic killing spree when he discovers his own homosexuality.

Canada comes first on energy

MUDDY DUNKING is enjoyed by these Boy Scouts who were among 2,000 from around the world to gather at Brant Park in Brantford, Ont., for a recent jamboree. It didn't take them long to find this man-size mudhole and do what came naturally.

Continental policy rejected by Hnatyshyn

OTTAWA (CP) — The government today rejected any idea of a common energy market with the U.S. and Mexico.

Government policy of energy self-sufficiency would be incompatible with the continental energy policy advocated by a number of U.S. politicians, said Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn.

"Our policy of Canadian self-sufficiency by its very nature indicates the fact that this government is interested in a Canada-first policy," he said.

This is the first time a cabinet minister has rejected the idea, which is increasingly being touted in the U.S. and was raised earlier this week by U.S. Senator Edward Kennedy, who urged the Carter administration to explore the possibility.

Two prominent politicians, Governor Jerry Brown of California and former governor John Connally of Texas, have also called for negotiation of such an agreement.

Hnatyshyn said continental energy policy was "the one issue that is apparently uniting all U.S. politicians, but it isn't uniting anyone else."

He said those politicians had failed to consider that Canada and Mexico might not find the arrangement as beneficial as the U.S.

Canada is interested in co-operating with the U.S. on energy projects, "but that's as far as I would go on it," Hnatyshyn said.

Hnatyshyn chatted with reporters before entering an inner cabinet meeting while Cyril Symes, New Democratic Party energy critic, was telling other reporters that the minister was in hiding to avoid making overdue decisions on natural gas exports.

"Important decisions must be made now on natural gas exports and the future of Petro-Canada," he said.

"Instead of showing leadership in these issues, the minister of energy is on vacation and will not comment until the fall. I find this abdication of leadership most irresponsible."

Symes released to reporters copies of a letter he has sent to Jack Stabback, chairman of the National Energy Board, urging denial of requests for permission to export more Alberta gas to the U.S.

The gas should be saved until a pipeline is built to ship it to Eastern Canada, Symes said.

$7,500 hike for MLAs

The 57 members of B.C. legislature are getting a 31-per-cent raise, their first since 1972.

A recent royal commission report said MLAs were underpaid and not getting enough expense money. Now they are in line for a $7,500-a-year hike.

The MLAs will receive $31,500 a year, up from $24,000. This consists of $21,000 a year in salary, up from $16,000, and $10,500 in tax-free allowance, up from $8,000.

The increase is expected to take effect immediately, but is not expected to be retroactive.

However, starting Jan. 1 MLAs will get automatic salary increases of 75 per cent of the percentage rate by which the average weekly wage increased in B.C. during the previous year. If the average wage drops, so will that of the MLAs.

The extra pay for the premier remains at $28,000 a year. Cabinet ministers will continue to receive an extra $24,000, opposition leader and speaker get $19,000 each and deputy speaker and leader of a recognized party get $8,500 each.

This means Premier Bill Bennnett will be paid $59,500, Opposition leader Dave Barrett and Speaker Harvey Schroeder $50,500 and cabinet ministers $55,500.

The salary increases are included in a bill amending the Constitution Act presented to the legislature Wednesday night by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis.

The report of the royal commission, tabled in the legislature earlier this year, noted the cost of living had increased by 55.6 per cent in the last five years and recommended a salary increase to $19,000 a year and an increase in the tax-free allowance to $8,500 for a total of $27,500.

It also recommended the MLAs get a further $40 a day to a maximum of 55 days to cover accommodation while in Victoria and that they be reimbursed for actual expenses while travelling on government business.

Changes in the bill will allow the government to pay expenses other than those

Loto win not the ticket

TORONTO (CP) — Suky Bacvic won $1,300 and an all-expenses-paid trip for two in a Loto Canada lottery draw last Dec. 3 but he spent $50,000 to win them.

The 42-year-old Toronto electronics technician, who emigrated from Yugoslavia 18 years ago, sold his house in Hamilton and invested the money in lottery tickets — 5,000 of them.

"When I had the $50,000 in my hand, I had to decide if I was going to buy another house in Toronto or invest it in some other way," Bacvic said.

"With so many tickets I figured I had to win big."

Even the trip-for-two to anywhere in Canada he won turned out to be useless.

It took Bacvic almost six months to check all his tickets. When he'd finished, he had only one week before the six-month time period for claiming the prize expired.

He sent in his winning ticket and a week later officials told him his travel ticket vouchers were ready. It was only after he collected his prize that he realized the tickets expired the same day.

But even with all his bad luck, Bacvic remains optimistic.

"So, I spent all this money and only won peanuts. I'm pretty broke now, but I can make more money through hard work."

$150,000 daylight robbery

NELSON (CP) — Two men armed with handguns escaped with about $150,000 worth of merchandise and cash in a smoothly-executed daylight robbery at a jewelry store here.

Police said the gunmen entered the store and pretended to be customers for about five minutes. The robbers then pulled guns on the four employees — one man and three women — and placed a sign on the door saying the business was closed until later in the day.

The gunmen took the employees to the rear of McLachlan Jewelers, where they bound, handcuffed and gagged them, and then began removing jewelry, watches and $3,500 in cash.

Wining, dining to eat up half of food dollar

OTTAWA (UPC) — Within six years, Canadians will spend as much money wining and dining at their favorite restaurant as they do at the supermarket, a government report said Wednesday.

Canadians now spend one-third of every food dollar on food and alcoholic beverages in restaurants, but between 1982 and 1985 this will increase to 50 per cent, says a consumer and corporate affairs report.

Canadians' changing eating habits will represent a boon for the restaurant industry, which will grow by 10 per cent or an additional 3,500 outlets in the next five years, the report says. It was based on interviews with 93 Canadian food service firms between December, 1977, and January, 1978.

The report, prepared by a Toronto consulting firm, says fast-food operations and restaurants geared to the family market will be the fastest-growing outlets.

Also in Ottawa, the Conference Board said Canadians are generally optimistic about the state of the economy despite warnings of an impending economic slowdown.

In its survey of consumer buying intentions, the Board said Wednesday Canadians intend to vacation in Canada, buy more cars and improve their homes within the next six months.

Fires hit holidays

Holidays have been postponed for rangers and other key forest service personnel across most of B.C. because of the high fire hazard.

A spokesman for the rangers said the order came out today in the form of a radiogram and affects all of Vancouver Island and most of the province.

"The fire hazard is high in the Victoria area and extremely high further up the Island," he said.

Victoria boater beats taxman

But Victoria photographer John Barnard has.

In a precedent-setting case with implications across Canada, Barnard has won the right to claim expenses on his 23-foot boat as a deduction on his income tax.

Barnard's lawyer George Jones said today that until now taxpayers could not claim expenses for anything that was a yacht.

The ruling was introduced in 1971 after the tax department felt too many businessmen were claiming expenses on boats primarily used for pleasure.

Jones said, however, the Income Tax Act failed to define what a yacht was.

"Recently, across the country, Revenue Canada has been taking the position that any boat is a yacht," Jones said. "They've been particularly hard on taxpayers in Victoria. It's sort of an out-of-the-way place and I guess they figured they could get away with it."

Jones maintained Barnard's boat didn't come within the layman's definition of what a yacht was and his view was upheld by Lucien Cardin, chairman of the Tax Review Board in a written judgment.

Barnard, a commercial photographer with offices at 1005 Broad, sought deductions of $1,669 and $3,234 for boat expenses incurred in 1975 and 1976. The minister declined the claims on Jan. 25, 1978.

Cardin, in his judgment, noted Barnard bought the boat for $13,000 and had used it primarily to accumulate information for a fishing almanac he published for use of sports fishermen on the West Coast.

Although the boat was considered a commercial vessel by the sellers, the tax department argued that the design of the boat was that of a pleasure craft and not that of a work boat and consequently could not be claimed as a deduction.

But Cardin held the intent of the regulation was to include only yachts or vessels used for recreational purposes.

"I do not believe that the design of the boat can, by itself, determine whether or not a boat is a pleasure craft," he said. "The only valid criteria, as I see it, in determining whether or not a boat is a yacht within the meaning of (the regulation), is the use that is generally made of it."

He concluded Barnard's claims were justified and hence, deductible.

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

The NDP accused the B.C. government Wednesday of creating an uncontrollable monster that will devour all the profits of the new ski development at Whistler while trammeling the rights of citizens already living there.

The opposition says the bill that sets up the Whistler Resort Association establishes a special society for the wealthy giving them all the powers of a municipal council without the normal checks other local government fall under.

The debate on second reading of the bill that raged through the long afternoon — and will continue today — reached heights of bitterness, shouting and name-calling unseen or heard since the NDP government was pushing through some of its legislation.

The surface intent of the legislation is to give investors in the new Whistler townsite that will accompany the development of Blackcomb Mountain ski area special considerations for promoting, developing, maintaining and operating the new resort.

But the NDP suggest there are underlying reasons tainting the supposedly innocent legislation.

They are calling the bill the "sleeper" of the waning legislative session, hinting it will lead to corruption that will blow up in the Social Credit government's face.

Party researchers have been in Whistler and Vancouver searching titles of land ownership, trying to find out who will gain from the windfall profits that are bound to be made by members of the special society. They are also looking for political connections.

If that report is true, the NDP is doing its best to drive the wedge deeper.

They've attached special siginficance to the fact Premier Bill Bennett quickly slipped from the chambers immediately before the start of second reading debate. He's hiding in his bunker, one NDP-er quipped.

And while its introducer — Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm — has remained silent except for his opening address — Labor Minister Allan Williams entered the debate with unaccustomed vigor. Williams is the area's MLA.

He accused the NDP of showing "abysmal ignorance" in their lack of comprehension of the bill.

In a biting personal attack of his own, he said the NDP was covering its incompetence with personal attacks.

Contrary to being a monster as the NDP suggests,

Some 5,000 little pieces of colored glass have to be removed, cleaned, replaced where missing, and put back in this stained glass dome in the Hook Sin Tong Charity building on Herald Street. The oval dome is the largest of its kind in Canada.

A painstaking puzzle in repairing glass dome

A jigsaw puzzle of some 5,000 pieces of colored glass — with many pieces missing — is a two-month restoration job for John McMillan at a 75-year-old Chinatown heritage building.

The Hook Sin Tong Charity building at 600 Herald is being restored by the department of heritage conservation, and stained glass artist McMillan, 28, has the painstaking task of dissembling, repairing and rebuilding one of Canada's largest non-insititutional stained glass domes.

The unusual oval dome measures 12 by 15 feet and stands more than six feet high atop the three-storey building, protected by an exterior skylight.

One of the 20 segments was nearly a total shambles, while in many others numerous replacements were required using modern glass with unavoidable color variations.

McMillan said each section of the dome must be taken apart individually, laid out flat and reassembled using new lead, then curved and re-puttied on a specially-built plywood mould where it hardens into shape.

He manhandles each segment in and out of position singlehandedly, from staging 15 feet above the society's clubroom floor.

The original job would have cost about $2,000, one-tenth the cost of replacement today, McMillan estimated.

Similar restoration work has been done by McMillan for the government at the Legislative Buildings and at courthouses in Prince Rupert and Prince George, and in Victoria churches.

Refugee funding organized

The Capital Regional District agreed Wednesday to co-ordinate donations from municipalities and electoral areas to help the Inter-cultural Association of Greater Victoria resettle refugees from Vietnam.

Saanich alderman John Mika made the appeal and said the association would work out of its office at 415-20 View Street, helping the refugees get over their "culture shocks" and giving information to individuals.

He asked for a total of $3,800 and said Saanich has committed itself to $1,000. Victoria has already voted to donate $1,500 and Oak Bay, $278.

It was pointed out that electoral areas have no contingency funds like municipalities and it was suggested that the provincial government might fund the electoral areas' share of $735.

Mika said the Capital Regional District could expect about 600 refugees snd that the provincial government is expected to debate spending $500,000 on the refugees's resettlement.

Housing awaits 10 Viet families

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will provide accommodation for about 10 Indochinese families as soon as the refugees can get to Victoria, a local CMHC spokesman said today.

Ray Pitt said an additional 30 families will get accommodation up-Island.

Locally, the 10 families will be scattered among all four municipalities, if possible.

"We want to spread the refugees around a wide area to give them the best chance to assimilate into the community," he said.

"If they congregate in one area they will have difficulty finding work."

The refugees, known as the boat people because they have not been granted permission to land anywhere in Asia, will be housed in units repossessed by CMHC. The units are in low-rent apartment and row housing developments.

The number of refugees coming to Victoria would depend upon the size of the families but it probably would not be more than 40 people because the units are no larger than three bedrooms. Some are only two bedrooms.

Federal Economic Expansion Minister Elmer Mackay, who is in charge of CMHC, said about 3,000 housing units will be available.

"We are attempting to help out so that the fairly large number of refugees coming into the country won't have to worry about having a roof over their heads," he said.

Canada announced last week it intended to triple its quota of Indochinese refugees and would take almost 16,000 by the end of the year and as many as 50,000 by the end of 1980.

Maximum rent for the units that have been repossessed by CMHC after owners defaulted on mortgage payments will not exceed $200 during the first six months.

"We're not looking at the option of making money from these people," Mackay said. "We wanted to help and provide accommodation that is now sitting empty."

After six months, the refugees will have the first option to buy the homes or pay the market rent.

"Quite possibly some of the refugees will want to stay while others will get their feet under them, find jobs and want to find another place to stay," MacKay said.

About 1,000 of the units are in Montreal and the suburbs of Longueuil and Laval. Another 500 units are located in Mississauga, 300 in Toronto, 200 in Oshawa and 300 in Hamilton. There are 100 units in Vancouver and Ottawa.

CRD set to block Saanich

The Capital Regional District will take Saanich to court before Aug. 6 in an attempt to quash the Tillicum shopping centre bylaw.

The action will be taken unless it receives a letter saying the municipality will agree to terms set down at the July 11 meeting of the regional board.

The terms include Saanich's promise not to consider any similar shopping centre, such as the proposed Broadmead complex, until the regional plan has been amended.

Until then, any municipality or electoral area contemplating a shopping centre of more than 100,000 square feet must apply to the regional board.

The decision to go ahead with legal proceedings was made Wednesday after Saanich mayor Mel Couvelier refused to stop proceedings on the 229,000 square foot Broadmead complex until the issue is settled.

(The developers envision the centre growing to 411,000 square feet over the next 10 to 15 years.)

Directors empowered board chairman Murray Glazier to cancel legal proceedings should Saanich change its stand.

Saanich had been asked to make a commitment before Wednesday. Instead, after a special council meeting on Tuesday Saanich submitted the following resolution to the CRD.

"Council is pleased to endorse the principle of restricting the size of regional shopping centres but request the CRD staff make a study which will examine the problems of definition and recognize the function, range of services, sphere of influence and prime major tenants."

Couvelier was repeatedly told by directors that the 100,000 square foot figure in the regional plan was merely an index, indicating at what size a shopping centre should be studied by the regional board regarding its impact on the district.

Sooke director Charles Perkins said he deplored the need for the CRD to take action against one of its components and asked if Saanich would change its stand.

Couvelier said if Saanich could be assured that the Broadmead project would be accepted there would be no problem.

He gained board approval in a motion to have ammendments to the regional plan completed and before the board by the end of September.

Ask the Times

Q. We were watching the hang-gliders on Dallas Road and wondered if it is a new sport. How old is it? N.G.

A. The first hang-glider was designed by Sir George Cayley, who died in 1857. It carried his coachman about 500 yards across a valley near Brompton Hall, North Yorkshire, Britain, in the summer of 1853.

Q. Is it true that cats are used by the civil service in Britain? B.B.

A. Yes. Out of a total population of 4,200,000 an estimated 100,000 are "employed" by the civil service.

Police board muzzles chief

Central Saanich police board has passed a resolution requiring its chairman to clear all news releases falling within police board policy.

The action was taken at a board meeting Wednesday night and follows an article that appeared in the Times June 28 in which Chief Bob Miles released statistics pointing out a dramatic increase in the crime rate in the municipality in recent years.

Miles said he needed four more officers to handle the problem and would be making the request to the board at a meeting on June 27.

Butler said she was upset with the article, not so much by what was said as by the fact the Times had received the information before the board.

There were reports that board members, at a meeting earlier this month, had discussed a motion to censure the chief for releasing the information.

Bulter would neither confirm nor deny that such a discussion had taken place.

No censure motion was passed.

Butler said today Miles is free to talk about normal police matters including crime rates and police programs.

She wouldn't elaborate on what specific police board matters would have to be cleared through her.

Preserve Chinatown, Wright urges

As member of an ad hoc committee studying a recently completed survey of Chinatown, Wright said it is important to the people of Victoria and for the tourist industry to save or bring back the image of the oldest Chinese community on the coast.

"We still have buildings that haven't been destroyed, still with alleys and interesting places, the shells of buildings that can be brought back and made exciting for the people of Victoria and the tourists," Wright said.

A boundary should be determined, within which the cultural identity of Chinatown can be restored.

"I think it can be done with the co-operation of the city, the community and the senior government," the alderman said.

But it should not be ethnically directed, he said. The project should strive for cultural and historical identity rather than an ethnic community.

Wright said it should not be necessary to confine development and business ventures to Chinese owners and entrepreneurs, "as long as the feeling and identity of Chinatown is represented.

"The important thing is, let's get on with the job. We have to show the Chinese community it's not rhetoric, but really important to Victoria," Wright said.

He expected the committee would have firm recommendations for city council before the end of August. Members have discussed the report prepared by University of Victoria geographer Dr. David Lai and are due to meet again next week.

Wright called Lai's study an excellent and detailed review of Chinatown's status and prospects. It has also been presented to the Advisory Planning Commission and Heritage Advisory Committee at a gathering that included members of the Chinese community.

Among the principal points made in the report are the suggestion that long-term hospital care be provided on the site of the former Chinese Hospital, and that a Chinese community centre would focus social and cultural activities.

There should also be beautification, urban design and greater opportunity for permanent residence.

Lai said a modest but important first step would be to provide the area with its first curbside trash containers.

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose sharply in mid-afternoon trading today. Activity was moderate.

Trading in shares of Asbestos Corp. resumed at the opening following a halt Wednesday. The Quebec Superior Court rejected a request by the company for an injunction to prevent a possible expropriation by the Quebec government. The company will appeal the ruling.

Asbestos Corp.'s stock gained 2 to $43 by 2 p.m.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 10:50 a.m. was 2,105,117 shares.

In the industrials, Keg Restaurants was unchanged at $2 on 1,000 shares, Hal Roach was unchanged at $3.50 on 1,000, MacMillan Bloedel was off ⅜ at $28 on 1,000 and Austin Investment was unchanged at .80 on 1,000. Canfor Investment Preferred A was off ⅛ at $6 and Northway Gestalt was unchanged at $1.65.

On the resource and development board, Cream Silver was up .03 at .61 on 298,000 shares, Continental Silver was down .25 at $4.45 on 151,233, Transcolt Resources was unchanged at $1.31 on 104,700 and Andex Mines was unchanged at .22 on 97,500. Nuspar Resources was up .04 at .82 and Liberty Petroleums was up .15 at $3.45.

On the curb exchange, Canzona Minerals was up .05 at .55 on 61,500 shares, Hesca Resources was up .16 at .73 on 33,000, Burlington Gold was up .01 at .36 on 27,000 and Cyclone Developments was unchanged at .39 on 17,500. Cascadia Resources was down .02 at .28 and Poney Explorations was unchanged at .73.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Thursday as euphoria over the nomination of a new Federal Reserve Board chairman wore off and the government provided new evidence that inflation is still a major problem.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was down today, backing off a gain of 9.73 Wednesday, when the market reacted favorably to the naming of Paul Volcker to the powerful post of Federal Reserve chairman.

London

The Financial Times index was down 3.1 to 461.3.

Industrials and oils declined while golds were mixed.
